Great Lakes Calamity

Cottage owned by Victor Saladonis in Cleveland's lakeshore suburb of Bay Village collapsed Tuesday under pounding waves as fierce storm whipped up Great Lakes. Tuesday's storm, which also rocked southwestern Ontario, was punctuated by high water levels. Lake Erie waters are close to record levels and many lakeshore homes are threatened.

Egan Pours Oil on Troubled Waters

New B.C.-Alaska Era Finds Going Slippery

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

British Columbia and Alaska entered what was reportedly a new era of co-operation Tuesday, then wasted little time in disagreeing over the question of supertankers.

After meeting in his office with Governor William Egan of Alaska and Commissioner Jim Smith of the Yukon, Premier Barrett said he and Egan had "agreed to disagree" over the use of the big tankers to ship oil down the west coast from Alaska to Cherry Point, Wash.

Although it appeared that tankers were an inevitability, B.C. would not give up the fight to prevent their use. If this battle is lost, Barrett wants to see the oil companies forced to post bonds worth millions of dollars.

Meanwhile, Barrett wants environmental safeguards established on a co-operative basis among B.C., Alaska and Washington state. He said he shared with Egan, the contents of a telephone conversation he had with Washington Governor Dan Evans in which it was agreed to set up joint legislative machinery to standardize pollution control measures.

In case of any ecological disaster, the idea would be to co-ordinate efforts and "establish a joint chain of command" in terms of using the resources at hand, Barrett said.

"We are interested in co-ordinating among our departments the kind of controls the environment needs," Barrett said.

While he disagreed with Egan's contention that the supertankers would not pose a real threat to the environment, Barrett nevertheless complimented him on his "first-class job of pioneering in terms of making these oil companies responsible." He said Egan had demonstrated a tough manner with the oil companies.

The plan is to make them toe the line economically.

Barrett said the machinery necessary for the environmental co-operation would be very informal.

"We're going to let the politicians meet and start working these problems out," he said. "We don't intend to go the conference route or the diplomatic exchange of lengthy papers. We just want to informally initiate and find accommodation that is best for all our jurisdictions."

He doesn't see this need for one permanent committee, but does think each jurisdiction might form a committee of its own. He plans to meet in Washington with Evans early in January and later in Alaska with Egan.

This brought the premier to his goal for the future. He said he hoped within two years that B.C. could play host to an environmental con-

Hunters Become Hunted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Two hunters said Tuesday they had to scramble for their lives under a barrage of rifle fire from an unknown gunman while hunting Monday.

Gilbert Dupont, 26, of Prince George, said he and room-mate Robert Gervais, 23, briefly exchanged shots with the gunman, who fled in a car.

RCMP Tuesday confirmed that Dupont had made a complaint but said no action would be taken because the assailant could not be described.

He said he and Gervais were hunting moose on a logging road and became stuck in the mud. As they were walking along the road toward a bulldozer which they were going to use to pull their vehicle out, a man began shooting at them from across a river.

He said "about 30 rounds" were fired by the man.

"It was like a machine-gun. We climbed on the cat and even while we were on it, he was still shooting. Three shots came so close I don't know how I'm still living today. My partner fired two shots at him and I exchanged one shot.

"We fired in his direction and he took off like a bat out of hell.

"He knew he wasn't shooting at animals." Dupont said he and Gervais were wearing red shirts and hats.

Mail Walkout Said 'Study'

TORONTO (CP) — More than 100 postal employees walked off the job for about an hour Tuesday at the main post office and at the airmail forwarding terminal at Toronto International Airport.

The employees said the walkout was for a "study session."

A post office spokesman said the walkout came during its "assured mail dispatch" time, which is set up to coincide with Air Canada Flights.

Strike Brake On Way

QUEBEC (CP) — A bill to ensure maintenance of essential services in a strike by 8,500 Hydro-Quebec workers was given first reading in the Quebec national assembly Tuesday.

Second-reading debate on the bill began immediately.

The bill was introduced after more than an hour's debate on a motion to proceed with an emergency debate on the legislation.

The motion passed by a vote of 67 to 6, with only Parti Quebecois members opposed.

The bill would have effect from the time it is enacted until the current dispute between Hydro-Quebec and its employees is settled.

It provides for fines of $50 to $250 a day for individuals refusing to provide essential services during the strike.

The bill defines essential services as all work necessary to ensure "full operation" of all electrical and gas services, and includes pay and clerical work involved in providing the services.

Europe Storm Toll Climbs to 64 Dead

United Press International

Europe and Great Britain Tuesday began mopping up the wreckage left by gale force winds that ripped across the continent wreaking heavy damage and leaving at least 64 persons dead in seven countries.

Scores more were injured and the high winds and rain sent flood waters into the homes of thousands.

Hardest hit by the winds which at some points reached 135 miles per hour were West Germany with 29 dead and East Germany with 12. The victims included an 11-year-old girl killed in Heutthal, West Germany, when a school building collapsed, and a woman killed in East Berlin when a church tower fell on her.

There were 10 killed in Poland, seven in Holland, three in Britain and one in Belgium, France and Portugal.

"The devil is loose," said a spokesman for the West German fire department which Monday answered more than 1,000 emergency calls relating to the storm.

West German insurance agencies said damage there would run into the millions of dollars.

In Britain, a falling chimney killed a Canadian tourist, Mrs. Phylis Davidson, 43, of Oshawa, Ont., and police blamed rain and wind conditions on a traffic accident that killed two men near Brighton.

The Polish news agency PAP said the winds — which in places hit 75 miles an hour — tore roofs off houses, overturned cars, played havoc with electricity and telephone connections and disturbed road and rail traffic in many parts of the country.

Teachers' Pay Tops $17,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver School Board and its 2,682 teachers ratified a 1972-73 contract Tuesday which gives the teachers a salary increase of 9.17 per cent.

The increase brings the salary of a beginning teacher with two years of university to $7,093 and that of a teacher with a masters degree and 12 years experience to $17,172.

Strike Starts At Nordair

MONTREAL (CP) — About 240 Nordair Ltd. employees in Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories went on strike at midnight Tuesday night to back contract requests.

Two Bandits Caught After Wild Pursuit

GREENSBORO, N.C. (CP) — Two armed bank robbers, who held five hostages for more than four hours and sought unsuccessfully to get an escape airplane, were captured Tuesday night in a wooded area after their car was rammed by pursuing authorities.

The two gunmen bolted from their getaway station wagon after it was rammed off the road by an unmarked police car, but officials grabbed them.

Police said four persons were injured but none seriously. One of the injured was identified as an FBI agent. It was not known if any hostages were hurt.

The robbers, holding their hostages, had led police on a chase through middle North Carolina after getting through a cordon around a Greensboro bank following a robbery attempt.

Police said at one point the robbers took the station wagon and the bank employee hostages to Greensboro's Friendship Airport and demanded an airplane and pilot.

Police said they were unable to make arrangements to meet the demand.

After parking in the middle of a runway at Greensboro for a short time, the robbers and their hostages raced to Winston-Salem. After getting there, the station wagon headed back to Greensboro.

Gypsies Charged In Palace Case

LONDON (UPI) — Eleven gypsies who begged Queen Elizabeth for a night's shelter in the courtyard of Buckingham Palace faced a judge Tuesday and pleaded innocent of breaking any law.

The 11, led by Grattan Puxon, secretary of the World Romany Congress, and his wife, Sanije, were released on bail of 10 pounds ($23.50) each and ordered to stand trial Dec. 22.

They are charged with obstructing police, not having permission to camp in the Queen's gardens, failing to remove their caravans when asked and staying in St. James Park when police told them to leave.

The charges and the call at Buckingham Palace stemmed from a gypsy protest Monday night against proposed legislation setting up designated sites for gypsy camps.

During the demonstration the Puxons knocked at the tradesmen's door of the palace and handed in a traditional gypsy gift for the Queen — a bouquet of carved wood flowers.

"We also asked Her Majesty if we could take refuge inside the palace courtyard for the night," Puxon said. He did not disclose the response but said police impounded gypsy caravans parked outside the palace.

B.C. Civil Service Rolls Along Unchanged

By MICHAEL HUGHES

Two months after the New Democrats took over the government of British Columbia, the civil service rolls along unchanged although the management structures of the province's two crown corporations have been scrambled.

Despite the administrative flip-flop that occurred in the Aug. 30 election, the day-to-day business of running the government is handled by virtually the same public servants as were at their desks prior to the defeat of the Social Credit party that had ruled since 1952.

With one notable exception, only the executive boards of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority and B.C. Railway bear the imprint of the "socialist hordes," as former premier W. A. C. Bennett called the NDP.

The exception is the firing of Ronald Worley as deputy minister of travel industry.

Worley was a personal friend of Bennett and last year completed a book on the former premier entitled the Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett.

Asked about his dismissal, Worley, now consultant for a Victoria radio station, said he could not work with the NDP because he is a "democratic free-enterpriser."

Other than Richard Colby, who was appointed by the NDP to replace Worley, all deputy ministers remain the same.

Premier Dave Barrett, a former civil servant himself, said when he took office that the civil servants need not fear that the axe would fall once the "hordes" moved in.

However, the premier has said all public servants should retire at 65. A spokesman in the Civil Service Commission said it was new policy under the NDP that the compulsory-retirement-at-65 rule will be enforced.

In the past, he said, those who reached that age were allowed to remain, subject to a review every three months, as long as the department they worked in approved. As a result there are a number of over-65 employees among the 30,000 government workers who will gradually be replaced.

The leave at 65 rule becomes interesting in light of the government's appointment of 64-year-old David Cass-Beggs to replace Dr. Gordon Shrum, 76, as chairman of B.C. Hydro when he retired Dec. 31.

The appointment of Cass-Beggs, now chairman of Manitoba Hydro and former general manager of the Saskatchewan Power Corp. was the subject of some criticism because of his NDP leanings.

Bennett termed the appointment "political patronage" and called for a public inquiry into the appointment, saying his performance in Manitoba and Saskatchewan had been reported by some as less than magnificent.

Asked whether there was any conflict with Cass-Begg's appointment and his own feelings about retirement at 65, Barrett would only say "he's not 65 yet," touching off speculation that Cass-Beggs may head Hydro only a short time.

Included in other Hydro personnel changes was the disbanding of the 10-man board of directors, which included two former Social Credit cabinet ministers and other party favorites, and replacing it with a five-man board.

The two former cabinet ministers — resources minister Ray Williston and recreation minister Ken Kiernan — were replaced with two NDP ministers. Also dismissed from the board was Einar Gunderson, long-time Social Credit party fund-raiser and a

Why Not?

WHY NOT . . .

Help out beleagured city, provincial and RCMP law enforcement agencies with our Armed Forces? I am given to understand the Canadian Armed Services are now among the highest paid in the world (no complaint about that) and I presume their efficiency rating is correspondingly high.

In the fight against one major crime problem alone — the ever-growing drug traffic — conventional police agencies admit quite frankly they are at best, managing a holding action. They do not have the necessary manpower to halt the tide of killer drugs; they scratch the surface, make small inroads.

If the drug trade is to be smashed, much greater manpower (backed by the proper amount of cash) must be brought to bear. Could not, therefore, the Armed Services be used — not necessarily in the direct fight — but as manpower to relieve police officers from other duties in order to concentrate on hammering the pushers?

There are many police duties — traffic control, etc., — that could be performed by the Armed Forces. Libertarians will scream "police state" or even "fascist state," but I haven't noticed them formulating any great (and workable) plans to stem the biggest crime problem on the blotter today. The strongest possible measures and methods are needed. The drug bit has been allowed to flourish too long now and if Armed Forces help would speed the alleviation one small bit, then it should be given thorough consideration . . .

DAYLIGHT SAVING on a year-round basis? Is there any real reason why we should only have daylight saving for roughly six months of the year? Remember that during the war years in Britain, double daylight saving was observed throughout . . .

□

A COMPLETE housecleaning in the Urban Affairs department in Ottawa — a cleaning that might, just might, allow for some improvement in the housebuilding field? The housebuilding field, you understand, is in a pretty deplorable state in our Dominion.

Instead of getting more families into houses, government policy is forcing more families into low and highrise apartments. New housing starts in Canada last year were outnumbered two to one by new apartment starts. Apartment living is not suited to the needs of young families, but Ottawa has not done anything to alleviate either the increasing land cost factor or the high mortgage rate problem . . .

STOP all the shilly-shallying around about private hospitals, rest homes, etc.? Why not take the problem by the horns and put all such health units under government control, take private money out of the field.

Rates in some such hospitals have already been boosted to take care of the minimum wage increase, putting the monthly rates beyond the reach of many people. Profit should be taken out of hospitalization and if our new NDP government wants to start takeovers, this is the obvious and very necessary starting point . . .

□

AS HAS BEEN suggested, a nationwide newspaper poll re the death penalty? A suggestion from Mrs. Gladys Ona of Sidney that The Colonist carry a ballot just prior to the death penalty debate in the House of Commons, might have merit. Certainly, it would be one of the easiest ways for local MPs to judge the tenor of thought on the subject . . .

□

A MORE equitable tax law insofar as the stock market is concerned? As you know, capital gains are now taxable in our country (which they should be) and capital losses are deductible. But there is no equality in the arrangement.

If, for sake of argument, you make $10,000 on the market, you must declare and pay taxes on $5,000. If, however, you lose $10,000, all you can claim is $1000 — one grand being the maximum amount you can write off in any given year. Now that, especially to a loser, just is not fair . . .

AS READER Robert Williamson wants to know, why not a Canadian ruling on the hockey reserve clause instead of a ruling by a Philadelphia judge, as was the case in the Johnny McKenzie jump to the Philaphia Blazers of the WHA? Williamson answered the question himself when he said he realizes Canadian hockey is controlled by U.S. interests, therefore, U.S. courts will rule on such matters.

Hockey is no longer our game, chaps.

B.C.-Alaska Era

ference involving representatives of Washington state, Oregon, California and Alaska that would deal with environmental protection "of the whole Pacific coast."

Egan, a Democrat, was in Victoria on what had been described in advance as a good-will tour. He had announced before leaving home that he hoped to convince Barrett that supertankers hauling oil down the coast would be among the safest in the world.

After Tuesday's meeting he talked of navigational safeguards being placed up and down the coast and said the tankers—he doesn't think the first would be in operation before the summer of 1976—would create a model for the world to follow.

Egan, a quiet-spoken man with white hair, said he couldn't foresee the tankers being "drastically dangerous to the well-being of the people of British Columbia or elsewhere. We (Alaska) are just as anxious to sustain the qualities of nature and the qualities of environmental life commensurate with the need for human beings to live and to exist and prosper."

In defining his disagreement, Barrett said he thought there was a "very great danger" in the shipment of oil on a regular basis along the coast.

"The governor and I had a very lengthy conversation about this. We agreed to disagree," Barrett said. "I made it clear to the governor we would do everything we could in our legislative power to block the tankers from coming down the coast."

Barrett said he realized the governor had done all he could to minimize the dangers but the same dangers were still there. He considered the risk too great.

"We also accept the fact that there is an inevitability about this — that British Columbia doesn't have the absolute power to block these tankers. We want to establish tri-pollution control standards at any event. We're not giving up the fight."

Before the tankers could ply the coast Barrett said he would want the oil companies to post multi-million dollar bonds that would hold them to financial responsibility for any oil spill.

Both Egan and Smith expressed optimism that relations with B.C. would be better than ever before.

There was mutual agreement on the need to develop a 110-mile highway link between Skagway and Carcross in the Yukon that would cut through part of the Yukon and 38 miles of B.C.

Barrett said B.C. could only take part in such development with proper funding from Ottawa. Highways Minister Robert Strachan would be in a position to approach Ottawa once the highway need had been defined.

Yukon Commissioner Smith said it should be remembered that 90 per cent of the tourists attracted to the Yukon would spend money in B.C.

Smith was quite expressive on the question of what he thought the change from Social Credit to NDP government would mean to relationship between the Yukon and B.C.

"It has presented a fresh breeze to what was stale air," he said.

former finance minister in the Bennett government.

Both Gundersonand Williston also were removed as directors of the B.C. Railway, the province's second Crown corporation. Barrett, like his predecessor, became president of the railway while Joseph Broadbent remains as general manager and director of the board.

Other new directors include Labor Minister William King, a former locomotive engineer, and Ted Rowland of Burns Lake, B.C., a member of the legislature in the late 1940s for the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, forerunner of the NDP.

One example of how little the new government tampered with the civil service is the continuing presence of Lawrie Wallace as deputy provincial secretary.

Wallace filled that role in the former government but also was deputy premier under Bennett. Despite his close connections with the Social Credit government he still carries on under a government which has a dramatically different political philosophy.

The civil service has been a stable group for nearly 20 years. The last major overhaul occurred in 1954 after Social Credit took over, when about 350 B.C. Hospital Insurance Service employees were let go after it was decided to drop the premium system in favor of financing hospital care through a provincial sales tax.

Although the civil service could carry on in its present state for some time, a number of changes are expected in the top echelons of public boards such as the Public Utilities Commission and the Liquor Control Board.

The LCB is one man, William Bruce, a long-time civil servant. A 1970 royal commission on B.C.'s liquor laws recommended a three-man board and it is likely that two NDP appointees will be appointed.

Two members of the PUC, chairman Dr. J. F. K. English and Fin McKinnon, are both over the retirement age of 65 and so may be replaced on that basis.

The third member, Lyle Wicks, is 60, but the fact that he was labor minister in the Social Credit government, until defeated 10 years ago by Barrett, may force him off the commission.

Take It a Little Easier

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Six years ago I had a heart attack and after seven weeks was released from the hospital and on my way to recovery.

Last winter I noticed I was getting short of breath if I walked a mile or so. The doctor had me take tests at the hospital and I was released. The doctor said my trouble was anxiety and a little angina pectoris, and now I should not work so hard.

I work around the house as well as shopping and gardening, and I love to do it. My doctor gave me nitroglycerine pills to take when needed. If I cut the grass or do some similar activity, I get a little short of breath and get like a seizure in my arms and chest, but I take a nitro and it is relieved for a while. I also take pills for my heart and nerves.

I asked the doctor if there were any other pills I could take that are better than nitro, and I have tried a couple but do not know if they are better.

What I would like is some kind of a pill that would let me do my daily work without the discomfort. I am 69 and hope to live to be 100, but am discouraged over no improvement and I sure don't want to be a vegetable doing nothing —C.R.

Your case, sir, doesn't sound nearly as severe as plenty of angina cases I've seen—but you've also got to understand what ails you and recognize that you'll have to live within your limitations. Certainly no reason to expect to become "a vegetable," though.

In a nutshell, at 69 your heart can't meet all the demands you are putting on it. You get short of breath and have chest discomfort when you've asked your heart to support more exertion than it can handle.

When you ask for a pill to let you remain as active as you were younger, you are asking too much. For most people nitroglycerine has proved to be the best and most satisfactory to give your heart a boost temporarily when you have overexerted. But use whatever one works best for you.

House of Terror Unearthed

MIAMI (UPI) — A father brought the limp body of his three-year-old son Monday night to a hospital where doctors said the child was dead on arrival from malnutrition.

Police quoted the mother, Mrs. Lois Jean Nozza, 28, as saying her son Dean had not eaten in three months. The police report said she knew the boy was starving but was afraid to do anything "because I was scared of my husband."

The father, Michael Nozza, 41, a sand blaster, was arrested on charges of manslaughter.

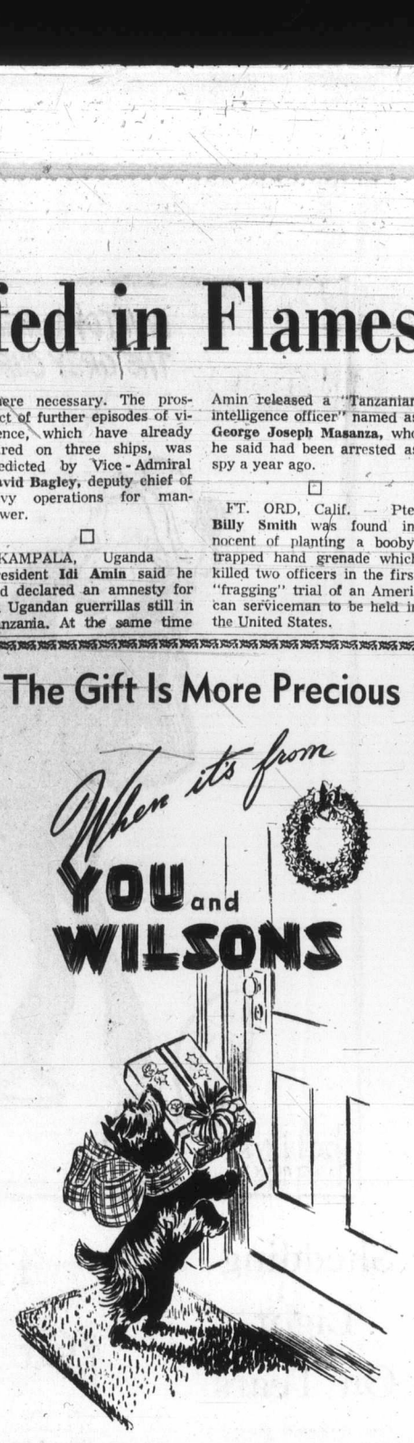

The couple's five other children, aged one to seven, were taken by youth services officials from the unkept, run-down bungalow which neighbors described as "a house of terror." Three of the children were put in a hospital for medical treatment, the other two placed with foster homes. them her husband, a thin man of medium height, "doesn't believe in doctors."

A doctor from the Dade County medical examiner's office confirmed the diagnosis that Dean Nozza died of malnutrition.

Mrs. Celeste Venero, a neighbor, wept when she learned of the boy's death.

"I knew it would happen, I knew it," she sobbed. "It's terrible that one boy had to be sacrificed, perhaps to save the others."

'Galloping Electricity Use'

NOT TOO MUCH has been said, or appears to have been done, about the "power crisis" Premier David Barrett was talking about a month or so ago. Along with Recreation and Conservation Minister Robert Williams he expressed concern over the increasing demands for electricity, and said: "We will have to cut down . . . I don't believe the current galloping electricity use is what we want."

The premier said B.C. Hydro likely would be asked to redirect the thrust of its "use more electricity" advertising. And he said consumers should switch off lights in their homes; also, in purchasing of appliances demand an improvement in models — less power ravenous stoves, washers and what-not. "One of the most foolish things I know of is that apparently the average refrigerator could work on a quarter of the electricity that it uses now."

The supply of electrical power is worrying Premier Barrett more than the economics of the B.C. Hydro operation, apparently. The residential section of the crown corporation's electrical service lost $7 million in the last fiscal year. The loss, as explained by Dr. Gordon Shrum, retiring head of Hydro, is due to a very low load factor. The utility must provide service with sufficient capacity to meet the peak demand of the household. This comes around the dinner hour. Applying the sales volume principle, if more electricity was used at other times of the day, losses would be reduced, if not wiped out.

Supply is the main worry everywhere. The Rand Corporation recently completed an in-depth study of electricity use in California and says the state's future could be "dim" unless there is curtailment. Continued power usage at the present rate could lead to "major blackouts, a deteriorated environment . . . and destruction of natural resources."

Among possible solutions, and instead of turning to widescale use of nuclear generators strongly opposed by conservationists, would be development of geothermal and solar power. Educating the public towards greater use of gas appliances is another thought, although there are supply problems here too.

Probably most effective would be the suggestion that electricity rates be increased or a tax imposed on consumer use, or both. The Wall Street Journal reports some states already are raising rates for higher-using customers — New York and Michigan among them.

Calls for voluntary restraints are considered to be a waste of words. People just don't react. Premier Barrett probably realizes this, and what he was thinking about when he asked British Columbians to hit their switches is not clear. Maybe it was a forerunner to higher rates.

A Step But Not a Stride

THE FACT THAT 79 countries participated in the ocean pollution conference just ended in London can be taken as encouraging. It indicates wide concern over the "universal sewer" that the sea has become. The signing by 58 of the nations of a convention banning the dumping of radioactive waste and other highly toxic material gives reason for feelings of optimism that the ocean and its resources can be saved. Undoubtedly more signatures will be affixed when the formal treaty stage is reached. It will be open for signing in Washington, London, Moscow and Mexico City during 1973.

An uncomfortable feeling persists, nevertheless, on the London deliberations.

Conference delegates are enthusiastic. There is satisfaction among them that the discussions will be beneficial; that the agreement reached is "a strong and effective measure which represents an historic step toward the control of global pollution" — the words of Russell Train, chairman of President Nixon's council on environmental quality.

But the differences that remain on policing and jurisdictional issues take the edge off the rejoicing. Another meeting is necessary to develop procedures for assessing liability in connection with environmental damage and to iron out disputed interpretations of certain clauses of the convention.

The type of punishment to be imposed against polluters has not been spelled out, either. It appears this will be left to each country to decide.

There is the matter, too, of coastal states being given the power to deal with offenders off their shores. Canada was the big voice on this question, pressing for a legal right to prosecute and even take physical action, if necessary, against an ocean polluter in areas adjacent to coastal waters. It fell on deaf ears.

The actual poisons listed in the anti-dumping agreement are the most obvious of killer materials — certain pesticides, mercury and cadmium compounds, plastic, oil, high-level radioactive waste, warfare chemicals.

And there are loopholes in the agreement on continued sea disposal of them — in emergencies or when land dumping would create unacceptable risk to human life.

There is the unanswered question, also, on all of the muck that is pouring into the sea through rivers and coastal discharge of wastes. What about that?

Perhaps it is expecting too much that greater accord was not reached. It certainly is not as far reaching as the enthusiasm of conference delegates might suggest.

Shedding Light On Tears

From the London Observer

Mothers who exhort their sons to keep a stiff upper lip "because big men don't cry" are giving an inaccurate reason for fortitude. Big men do cry.

The experience of weeping in adult life appears to be almost universal, according to Dr. Dalbir Bindra, of McGill University, who reports in the "Bulletin of the British Psychological Society" on the results of a questionnaire completed by equal numbers of men and women aged between 17 and 31.

Both men and women reported on crying episodes lasting from a few seconds to 2½ hours. The average duration, however, tended to be shorter among men (two minutes or less) than among women (more than two minutes but less than 15).

Descriptions of weeping were classified under four headings, in order of increasing intensity: "lump in the throat" (48 per cent of men, 28 per cent of women); watery eyes without flow of tears (56 per cent of men, 24 per cent of women); flowing tears (28 per cent of men, 64 per cent of women); and sobbing (28 per cent of men, 64 per cent of women). Thus, while men experienced throat-lump and watery eyes significantly more frequently than women, women were much more prone to display flowing tears and sobbing. Dr. Bindra attributes this to the cultural inclination of men to suppress tear-flow.

More men than women wept when the prevailing emotional state was elation or dejection, and more women than men wept when the prevailing emotional state was anguish. For instance, 32 per cent of men reported weeping when elated, compared with only 4 per cent of women. No women, but 20 per cent of men, said that music could reduce them to tears.

In states of anguish 88 per cent of women wept, but only 36 per cent of men. Sixteen per cent of women, but none of the men, said they were more inclined to weep when tired, under stress, sick or hungry.

The Lonely Rise Of Robert Stanfield

By GORDON GRANT

Only the most brash of political analysts have ventured more than the most tentative views as to what the October election added up to. A few facts seem clear: a chastened Trudeau soon must face a Commons very different from the House he had largely ignored since the nation handed him a massive mandate in 1968; Mr. Lewis did not win the election in spite of his public euphoria. The central fact may lie in the durable makeup of the quiet man from Nova Scotia. Robert Stanfield probably is only months away from the chief executive chair. The nation had better wish him well.

Curiously, a five-year series of seeming failures add up to a comforting degree of hope that Stanfield may be the man to work out not only the improbable but the seeming impossible.

The improbable has a formidable variety of faces: increasing unemployment, inflation, mounting crime and others. None of these is a Canadian invention and no easy solutions are visible in the western world. The seemingly impossible is to persuade Quebec to accept at last a role in Confederation as an amiable, contributory partner.

Mr. Marchand put the problem succinctly: "Quebec," he said, "was happy with her treatment by Ottawa; English Canada was not happy with it." The electorate can take Mr. Marchand's word for it; he is the man who has been handing out the money.

But Stanfield has faced the improbable and the near-impossible before and things political in Quebec are seldom what they seem. He is far more knowledgeable about and sympathetic to Quebec's very real problems and ancient wrongs than a Bennett or a Diefenbaker ever could have been. These qualities are unlikely to escape practical politicians in Quebec when the next election rolls around.

Stanfield brings a few vital qualities to the task that probably lie ahead of him. He is that rare bird, the all-but-complete adult, whose scarcity the late Brock Chisholm often lamented, as nearly as possible without egocentritic. Clear adult vision insists on seeing things as they are. This takes time and rules out the glib response; action dictated by adult reason, though, has a habit of working out astonishingly well over the long haul.

Stanfield's election to party leadership surprised and disappointed a good many Conservatives. In the process, the humiliating dismissal of John Diefenbaker outraged countless party mainstays. Dalton Camp was the chief author of this but Stanfield had to swallow far more than his share of the bitter grapes of wrath. His lonely load in the 1968 election was made heavier by what appeared to just about all Conservatives a fatal blunder in the Commons. A King, a Diefenbaker, in a dramatic performance undoubtedly would have destroyed the Pearson government — and either might have found himself presiding over a nation that had just lost its shirt.

In the campaign Stanfield committed another seeming blunder; he espoused the "deux nations" philosophy in the reasoned belief that a semi-autonomous Quebec might prove a more co-operative partner than she had been as a perennially malcontent province. He gained nothing at all in Quebec and was heavily damaged in Ontario and the West. The anatomy of the 1972 election suggests, though, that Stanfield may have been close to the mark in 1968.

Over the years his leadership in the Commons evoked reactions in English-speaking Canada ranging from impatience to near-contempt. Reading of Hansard and newspaper files, though, brings out a very different picture of leadership. In the critical time of the proposed U.S. surcharges, potentially infinitely damaging to Canadian industry, he publicly offered all the strength and help his position might bring to Trudeau. (Mr. Benson's slender talents were despatched to Washington to face the formidable Connally.) In Peking in 1971 he quietly declined to endorse a highly critical Chinese declaration on the American performance across the world.

Stanfield has treated Turner, Davis and a few other Trudeau ministers as honored fellow workers in a difficult line of work. His stinging criticisms of Sharp, Benson, Goyer, Mackasey and Trudeau himself make far more arresting reading than the thunderous denunciations of John Diefenbaker.

In a few months Stanfield and Trudeau must face up again to the weary task of election. This time, in sober truth, the overriding question is likely to be not what policies might best fit the nation but what sort of nation may be left to meet the policies. Either may be faced with the necessity of holding a plebiscite to determine if Quebec intends to stay in Confederation before the separatist provincial government that well may topple Bourassa stages its own referendum. This is the raw material of nightmares but the French-language press of Quebec leaves no doubt as to the reality of the threat.

Curiously, Stanfield may be by far the better equipped to face the crisis. His political experience runs back to 1953; he has faced up to shocking personal tragedy and to a lonely political struggle across all the land. English-speaking Canada gave him an overwhelming mandate on October 30. The practical people of Quebec — who are, after all, well aware of the potential disaster in separation — may elect to stay around to discover what proven intelligence, fortitude and courage can do about their problems — along with the problems that still must afflict the rest of us.

Ted Kennedy Seen as Hope Of Democratic Party Future

By MARQUIS CHILDS from Washington

Throughout the intolerably long, repetitive, unresponsive campaign now ended one constant has varied hardly at all. Sen. George McGovern was never able to reach beyond the constituency, the minority of the young, the disaffected, the blacks, who in a succession of primaries gave him the Democratic nomination.

The blunders were plain, beginning with the Eagleton tragedy and running through the candidate's indecision. His managers often seemed to be working at cross-purposes and with faulty judgment. But that was irrelevant to the basic fact that neither his personality nor what he had to say carried any weight with the mass of the voters. He is a rural populist with no trace of the urban experience that is today's common denominator.

Doleful predictions, with great crocodile tears shed by the Republicans, have heralded the breakup of the Democratic coalition put together by FDR. Organized labor is gone. The ethnics are gone. The city machines are in dissolution. Thus runs the dirge recited over and over as the polls added up to unfailing adversity.

For the present election all this is true. But for the future, in my opinion, it is nonsense. While the coalition of the past may not be reconstituted as it was before, self-interest alone will bring the component parts together. Humpty Dumpty has had a great fall, but in this instance Humpty Dumpty can be restored.

Organized labor will have the strongest possible motive to unite within the party of opposition. The loud bleating of George Meany about price increases and wage controls before the chieftain of the AFL-CIO decided to sit out the election will be more compelling than before. Price increases in virtually all public services, in autos and a whole range of things that make up the household budget will spur the return of protesting laborites to the party to which they long gave allegiance.

These big price boosts will be part of the reward of the millionaires' club that poured such generous amounts into the Nixon campaign. It is impossible to believe that organized labor, the pillar of the old FDR coalition, can remain within the party of the big rich.

Consider, too, what the disappearance of George C. Wallace means. It is most unlikely that he will ever again participate in a national election. In 1968 he got 13 per cent of the vote running on his third-party ticket. In the Democratic primary in Michigan before he was seriously wounded by an assassin's bullet he pulled more than half the total vote. His stand-in this year, John G. Schmitz, has attracted only a tiny fraction of the vote that would have gone to Wallace.

The so-called ethnic vote, exaggerated out of all proportion to its cohesiveness in the current campaign, is unlikely to stay within the confines of the Nixon party. And it should be noted that it is a Nixon, rather than "a Republican" party as one consequence of the nature of the re-election campaign.

The logical candidate for reassembling the party structure is Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts. He has the backing of "labor." For the young the name itself is still magic. On civil rights, he has fought consistently for every measure of equality, so the blacks cannot fault him.

Vulnerable though he is on several scores, Kennedy demonstrated his loyalty during the campaign. He appeared repeatedly with McGovern and spoke independently in state after state. If anyone could have brought the Democratic regulars, deliberately alienated in instance after instance by the triumphant McGovernites following the primaries, it was Kennedy. Those ties remain strong. The rumblings of trouble within the Kennedy family over the rivalry in the future of Sargent Shriver, the brother-in-law who made a valiant try as the vice-presidential candidate, will have little bearing in 1976.

The future of the McGovern faction is the question that remains. The zealous, often far-out young who were the cheering and the heckling squads for McGovern will be deeply disillusioned. They will see the old politics triumphant. Many of them have learned by diligent effort what grass-roots politics is all about. Their hero, George McGovern, has said he will never again run for president. With the passage of time they will regroup and their hard-earned skills put to better advantage.

Brazil was proclaimed a republic 83 years ago today — in 1889 — when the army revolted against Emperor Pedro II, head of the Cobourg-Braganza family which had ruled Portugal and Brazil. Pedro II's father had proclaimed Brazil's independence in 1882 when the Portuguese government tried to reassert power over the colony it had lost during Napoleon's occupation of their homeland.

Pedro II ruled from age five, when his father was deposed for spending time and money on securing the Portuguese throne for his daughter Maria.

The At-Long-Last Posting of Air Guards

By BORIS KIDEL from Bonn

Measures to prevent hijacking of another Lufthansa airliner have been taken belatedly by the West German government. Specially - trained security guards, supplied by the frontier police, are to fly on Lufthansa planes on Middle East and other routes which are considered to be potentially dangerous. Other guards are being assigned to airports abroad to search passengers before they board West German aircraft.

★ ★ ★

These steps, of course, are a direct consequence of the recent Lufthansa hijacking which led to the release of the three Arab terrorists captured in Munich after the massacre of Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games. But why were these security measures not prescribed earlier? The West German government has so far failed to give a satisactory answer.

It was to be foreseen that Palestinian terrorists would strike again to obtain the release of their three captured comrades. The interior minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, has himself admitted that the terrorists were expected to stage "a spectacular action" to obtain the liberation of the three captives.

In anticipation of such a coup, security precautions were greatly intensified — in Bonn. Officials apparently feared above all that Arab terrorists would try to kidnap a prominent politician and hold him hostage. Police reinforcements were brought into the federal capital from other cities and bodyguards were assigned to protect leading politicians and their families. Yet at the same time measures to forestall the hijacking of a Lufthansa plane appear to have been perfunctory.

Until now only Lufthansa flights to Tel Aviv were escorted by guards. These security agents, who are said to be unarmed during the actual flight, are also responsible for ground and for passenger control. Another 20 guards have already been sent to unspecified airports abroad to tighten up ground control there.

While the lack of effective precautions is criticized in Bonn it is now generally accepted, even by critics, that the government had no alternative but to release the three terrorists, jailed in Bavaria, once the airliner had been hijacked. "Under the given circumstances," Chancellor Willy Brandt told the cabinet, "we were obliged to give priority, over all other considerations, to the protection of human lives."

The chief consequences of the entire affair is a serious deterioration in German-Israeli relations, and the Christian Democrat (CDU) opposition is bitterly criticizing the government for failing to adopt a tougher attitude towards Libya which gave refuge to the two hijackers and the three freed terrorists.

Franz Joseph Strauss and other opposition leaders have urged the government to demand the extradition of the five men. Others have called for a break in diplomatic relations. The government pleads that the absence of an extradition treaty between West Germany and Libya make it pointless even to request the surrender of the five men. All the government has done, without any hope of success, is to demand that the two hijackers should be put on trial.

The restrained official reaction in Bonn is at least partly motivated by anxiety to avert a break between West Germany and the Arab world. Seventy-three per cent of West Germany's oil supplies come from Arab countries. Libya alone covers 30 per cent of Germany's needs.

Economic considerations clearly play a major role in the government's attitude. The government is also reluctant to withdraw its diplomats because such a move would only help East Germany to increase its influence in Arab countries.

Greater Victoria Trustees Approve 11.7 per cent Increase in Spending

Property Taxes May Soar If School Budget Goes Through

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Few taxpayers in the Greater Victoria school district will be pleased with the provisional budget last week by the school board which shows total spending 11.7 per cent higher than in 1972.

The rise could mean a possible 11 or 12 per cent increase in school taxes, maybe as much as three or 3½ mills.

The trustees point out that the increase for the homeowner may not be as much as that, even if that budget becomes the final one, because the new NDP provincial government may, as it promised during the election campaign, do something to ease the school tax burden on the property owner.

For example, the provincial government may increase its basic education program grants to school districts.

But even a move like that won't help the Greater Victoria district because those grants are given on what is fundamentally a per-student basis, and they'd have to be increased considerably to make up for the loss of provincial money the district will suffer because of a decrease of about 1,000 this year in its student population.

Also, it's not impossible the total final budget could be more than the provisional figure of $29.9 million if final settlements between the board and either its teachers or its CUPE employees are higher than anticipated.

Ney

For instance, every percentage point the teachers win above the figure anticipated in the budget adds $160,000 to the total or forces cuts in other areas

It came as a surprise that the trustees passed the budget without a single cut, in fact with $33,000 added to the administration's original figure.

Since the NDP removed the severe budget limitations that had kept school districts' spending this year to 108 per cent of the basic program costs, Greater Victoria trustees had repeatedly urged financial responsibility on the part of boards and teachers to prevent school costs from skyrocketing.

The general impression had been created that the board was unlikely to approve a budget which was increased more than 10 per cent of last year's, the "moral guideline" on school spending set by the NDP.

But Dr. Philip Ney was the only trustee to oppose passing the budget with the 11 per cent increase, and only two attempts, both somewhat lacklustre, were made to reduce it at all.

Trustee Walter Donald told the meeting that the high level of the budget is at least in part a result of the severe 1972 restrictions which forced the board to cut $900,000 from its provisional budget and, in so doing, to skimp on school programs in many areas.

"Just like a toothache, if you ignore it, the cavity doesn't go away," said Donald. "It's still got to be filled sometime.

To bring the budget back to the 10 per cent increase only would entail cutting about $455,000 from the provisional figures.

"You tell me where to start cutting that amount without cutting back on quality," said Donald after the meeting.

And indeed to find possible cuts that don't take something away from the children in the classroom is an extremely difficult task

By far the largest part of the increase is allotted to teachers' salaries — $2.1 million out of $3.1 million. This is a matter over which trustees have basically little control, because if they can't negotiate a settlement acceptable to teachers, they must accept the ruling of a binding arbitration board on the matter.

Most of the rest of the increase, aside from that to take care of normal inflation, will go to pick up programs which had to be dropped last year because of budget limitations.

It includes such items as preventive maintenance of school buildings, sex education, research into teaching methods, and attempts to lower the pupil-teacher ratio.

These are all programs which will either be of obvious benefit to pupils or will save the board money in the long run, trustees say. And even with the increases, the money budgeted for many such programs is not up to the 1971 level.

Victoria is not the only district caught in the budget squeeze. District superintendent A. J. Longmore said that many B.C. districts, including Vancouver, were budgeting at levels of 114 to 115 per cent of the 1972 estimates, and one district had gone as high as 145 per cent.

It comes down to the question of whether the taxpayers feel the extra programs, the lower pupil-teacher ratio, are worth the extra taxes they will cost, or thether they'd rather sacrifice some of those programs to save on taxes.

The onus is now squarely on the local taxpayers, to agitate, to write letters to the board — to make it clear to the trustees before the budget is finally adopted next spring just which of those alternatives they choose.

And that choice may well be one of the main issues in the Dec. 9 school board elections.

Fate of Tiny Party Can Decide Election

Brandt's Partners Hold the Key

By WILLIAM FORREST, from London

One day last month a middle-aged woman crossed the frontier from East to West Germany to visit her sick father. In doing so she made history. She was in fact the first East German to benefit from the new treaty between the two German states which greatly eases the communist restrictions on travel to the West.

It has been said that the thousands of Germans who have fled from the East over the past 20 years and more were voting with their feet — voting against communism and for Western-style democracy.

The woman I have mentioned was doing more than that. Though she may not have known it herself she was voting with her feet, not for the West against the East but for one side against the other in the current West German election campaign.

★ ★ ★

For all observers of the German scene agree that the East Germans signed that treaty because they — and their Soviet masters — want Chancellor Willy Brandt and his ruling coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats to win the election and hope the new treaty will help him to do so.

The chancellor, for all his personal popularity, needs all the help he can get. With only a few days to go before the election, on November 19, the opinion polls put the opposition Christian Democrats in front with 46.4 per cent to 44.9 for the Social Democrats and 5.6 for the Free Democrats.

This gives the ruling coalition a combined vote of 50.5 per cent, which is more than they got in the last elections three years ago. But three big question marks hang over the final outcome.

● Can the coalition hold on to their present narrow lead?

The pendulum appears to be swinging against them. A month ago the opinion polls gave them a 10 per cent lead over the Opposition. Today their lead is only five per cent.

● Will the Free Democrats, the smaller of the coalition parties, have any seats at all in the next Bundestag?

To qualify for parliamentary representation a party must win at least five per cent of the total vote. In 1969 the Free Democrats got 5.8 per cent which entitled them to 30 seats in the Bundestag. The opinion polls show them to be still afloat, but only just and with a tendency to sink even lower.

In local elections last month in Lower Saxony their share of the vote was only 5.2 per cent. If the downward slide continues there will be no Free Democrats in the next Bundestag and the Social Democrats will have to face the triumphant Christian Democrats alone.

● If the Free Democrats do survive the five per cent test will they necessarily adhere to the coalition with the Social Democrats?

Brandt

Their leader, Walter Scheel, foreign minister in the outgoing coalition, categorically says they will form a coalition "only with the Social Democrats." But not all his party colleagues go along with him.

Assuming they qualify for a place in the next Bundestag the Free Democrats will almost certainly hold the balance of power between the two big parties, just as the New Democrats are now doing in the Canadian parliament.

They will thus be open to offers from either side and it is an open secret that if the Christian Democrats come up with a good enough offer some leading Free Democrats would be quite ready to accept it.

It may be recalled that in the last Bundestag quite a few of the 30 Free Democrats succumbed to various temptations from the Christian Democrats and, by deserting the Brandt-Scheel coalition, whittled away its narrow majority and finally forced it to go to the country a whole year before it normally need have done.

Scheel may vow fidelity to the pact with the Social Democrats — though even he says it cannot be "forever" — but he cannot vouch for all his party brethren.

These then are the big question marks hanging over the German elections. On only one thing indeed are all the pundits agreed: it's going to be a photo-finish between the two big parties on November 19.

★ ★ ★

And the rulers of East Germany, as well as those of the Soviet Union, are doing their best to ensure that when the photo is developed it will show the Brandt-Scheel combination, champions of the policy of reconciliation with the communist bloc, passing the winning post first.

'German Problem' Solved for Time Being

Europe Breathes Easier

Not this week and probably not even this year — but soon two Germanies will be formally admitted to the United Nations, and thus recognized universally by the family of nations. That means that the major world powers have finally agreed on a long-term solution to the problem of the relations between the German people and the other peoples of Europe.

That relationship has been at the core of European politics, and European wars, for generations. It would be too much to say that it has been solved safely for all time. But there is a settlement, and it seems reasonably likely to be satisfactory to those concerned for the visible future. For the moment at least, there is no longer a "German problem."

The settlement consists simply of the fact that the existence of two separate German states is accepted by the respective allies of both, and that the two will, as soon as the arrangements are completed, be admitted to the United Nations as full-fledged and generally recoginzed independent countries.

The corollary of this agreement is that the people of the two Germanies will be increasingly free to visit each other and trade with each other. Recognition of the two states opens up channels of traffic between the two. The Berlin wall will gradually lose its meaning as a barrier which separates the people of the same language and ethnic background from each other.

It has taken 27 years to arrive at this settlement. It took so long because the solution cuts across a deep urge among many Germans to be the biggest and strongest single political unit in Europe. The idea of a "Gross Deutschland" is planted far back in European history. It is an urge which has worried and at times frightened other peoples of Europe.

Many a coalition has been formed against the idea of a Germany bigger than any other European country. The new settlement precludes a "Gross Deutschland."

★ ★ ★

West Germany as we know it today is roughly equal in size and population to France, Italy and Britain; it is a country of European scale. It does not frighten or worry its neighbors: it is a good neighbor to them. That is at the essence of the settlement: that there be no German state substantially bigger and more populous than France, Italy or Britain.

At one time there was the Holy Roman Empire, largely made up of German-speaking peoples, which dominated the political life of Europe. It was the biggest thing going in its time. It aspired to contain all of Europe. Its head — the emperor — considered himself to be the chief political figure of all Europe, and expected all other kings and princes to recognize his superiority.

That first German Empire, or Reich, was broken up by the religious wars of the 17th century. The German peoples were fragmented into small states, each of which was either Catholic or Protestant. The Catholic states tended to reform around Austria. The protestant states of the north clustered around Prussia.

The Second Reich was founded by Bismarck in 1870 and became the major reason for the Frist World War. The Versailles settlement, ending the war, reduced Bismarck's "Gross Deutschland" to a European scale.

★ ★ ★

Hitler's Third Reich was the last and most ambitious attempt to bring all the German-speaking peoples together into a single political system, and to then extend their rule over the other peoples around them. His Third Reich was intended to control all of Europe from the English Channel to the Ural Mountains — at least. It took the Second World War to break that imperial urge.

Ever since, European politics has revolved around the question of what kind of Germany would emerge from the Second World War settlement. Would the present East and West Germanies be united? Or would they be kept permanently apart?

The documents have been signed which provide for a long-term separation. East Germany is now contractually as separate from West Germany as is Austria, or the Netherlands, or the Scandinavian countries — all of whose people speak Germanic languages and are ethnic kinfolk.

Like the English-speaking peoples, the Germans are to inhabit two different countries. Common language does not require a common nationality.

Democrats, Labor Start Reappraisal

Meany's Tactics Worked

By PETER BUCKLEY, from Washington

The role and the influence of organized labor in American politics are expected to receive profound reappraisal among Democratic party leaders in coming months as they try to restore a coalition shattered by George McGovern's presidential candidacy.

Labor, too, will undoubtedly be doing some re-thinking of its own.

The easy alliance of the trade-union movement with the Democrats, so familiar in recent U.S. politics, can no longer be taken for granted after last week's elections.

George Meany, the 78-year-old labor patriarch and president of the AFL-CIO, has taken on new authority as a result President Nixon's re-election and the return of a Democratic majority to both houses of congress.

That result is exactly what Meany and a majority of the AFL-CIO executive council had predicted.

They refused to endorse either McGovern or Nixon, although they made plain their distaste for the Democratic candidate. Instead, they concentrated their efforts on the election of pro-labor candidates for congress.

Analyses of the presidential vote appear to have vindicated Meany's course of action.

★ ★ ★

Slightly more than half of all union members are estimated to have voted for Nixon, with the margin rising to 60 per cent among construction workers and other blue-collar union men.

★ ★ ★

McGovern's efforts to woo labor support were generally frustrated. Meany and other old-line union officials were alienated both by the Democratic party reform movement and by the McGovern platform, which they regarded as too anti-war and too radical.

The Democratic nominee got vigorous support from some branches of labor, notably the auto workers, machinists and public-service unions, but was demonstrably unpopular among the building trades, Teamsters and numerous other worker groups.

On labor's side, any conciliatory approach from the Democrats is likely to be dealt with gingerly.

Meany must still restore unity to labor's political approach by bringing together both pro-Nixon and pro McGovern members of the AFL-CIO.

The dissident McGovern backers are likely to want some reassurance of a return to pro-Democratic discipline, but Meany seems to be in a position to dictate terms.

★ ★ ★

If he succeeds in reuniting labor, Meany can then start aiming for a more pliable Democratic organization, under the threat of repeating labor's neutrality in future elections.

Shore Dwellers Complain

Lakes Probe Urged

A continued survey of 17 lakes in the Capital Region should be carried out to determine their degree of pollution, if any, senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said Tuesday.

On his recommendation, Greater Victoria health board decided to ask the provincial government for staff and equipment to conduct the survey.

The health board has requested two additional inspectors, one clerk, $500 a month for equipment rental and a percentage of the anticipated administration costs.

Whitbread told board members he has received many complaints from lake shore residents throughout the capital region about the lack of pollution assessment.

He said the health board should control the water quality of the lakes on a year-round basis, but didn't have the staff to do it. Occasional testing of the water, he said, wasn't enough.

The lakes involved are Fairey Lake, Kemp Lake, Young Lake, Glinz Lake, Matheson Lake, Glen Lake, Langford Lake, Florence Lake, Thetis Lake, Prospect Lake, Beaver Lake, Elk Lake, and Blenkinsop Lake.

Four lakes on the Gulf Islands are also to be included —St. Mary's Lake, Maxwell Lake, Cusheon Lake and Weston Lake.

Nine of the lakes are also used by residents as a source of drinking water.

The survey is to assess the impact of recreational activities, such as swimming and boating on the water quality. It will also assess effects of septic tank systems and shoreline dwellings.

Music from Spain

One of the world's foremost guitarists, Spain's Narcisco Yepes, will be guest artist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra Sunday and Monday at the Royal Theatre, and in recital Wednesday at McPherson Playhouse.

Yepes was born 45 years ago in Lorcas, Southern Spain, and began studying guitar at five. He came to the attention of Ataulfo Argenta, director of the Spanish National Orchestra, in 1946 and was urged to go to Madrid.

He made his concert debut there and subsequently toured with Argenta through Europe. Since then he has performed with leading orchestras and in recital in the near East, North and South Africa, North America and Japan.

Laborer Debut Painful

A 19-year-old Saanich resident survived a 40-foot fall Monday — his first day of work as a laborer on an apartment site at Burnside and Harriet.

Royal Jubilee Hospital officials said Keith Pearce, 4175 Douglas, was in fairly good condition with severe lacerations to his right leg. However, they added, he did not suffer any fractures in the fall.

Victoria police said Pearce was in his first day as a laborer for Rolston Construction and was laying shiplap on the fourth-floor ceiling of the building when he stepped backward and fell 40 feet to the ground, landing in dirt.

On the way, he struck a scaffold support about 30 feet above the ground, causing the lacerations to his upper and lower right leg.

Fondues create easy "fun do's"

'Fondue Bourguignone' is really individually deep frying bite-size morsels in hot oil.

The 'fondue' has come to mean many specific things to many people but whether you follow a traditional route or go for a Canadianized version of using a 'hot pot', the key thing is informality and FUN. Basically we can break-down 'fonduing' into two categories:

One: A sauce melted and kept hot on an alcohol or sterno burner, is used in which to dunk bite size pieces of compatible ingredients. This is traditionally bread dunked in cheese but can be corn chips, crackers, or carrot sticks in Chile Con Carne, Sloppy-Joes or concoctions of cream soup.

Two: Ingredients literally deep-fried in oil kept hot by the 'fondue pot'. This is traditionally called 'Fondue Bourguignone (pronounced bergin-non) which always has been misleading because it is not fondue (meaning melted) nor is it Bourguignone (meaning red Burgundy wine—none is used). Anyway, if you want to be 'in' that's what you call it.

We can't possibly list all the variations on the theme here but we suggest you pick up our free recipe sheet called 'Fun with Fondues', get a 'fondue pot' (you can buy them fancy or plain and simple . . . we've got one for under five dollars) and set out to have fun.

Good Old British Auntie Marks Golden Anniversary

LONDON (UPI) — Auntie was 50 Tuesday, and the whole nation is part of the celebration.

"Auntie" is the good, grey British Broadcasting Corp., which has been kicking up its heels with a three-month binge of birthday celebrations — exhibitions, special postage stamps, anniversary books and scores of radio and TV programs.

It is so much a national institution that Queen Elizabeth opened one anniversary exhibit and Prime Minister Edward Heath spoke at a birthday banquet.

But on Nov. 14, 1922, The BBC was Arthur Burrows stepping up to a telephone mouthpiece to read the news. Then the BBC consisted of Burrows, John Reith — the straightlaced Scottish Presbyterian who stamped his organization with the "auntie" character it still bears — and three other men.

Today more than 25,000 people work for the BBC, and it is inescapable in every facet of British life.

Spin the radio dial and it's all BBC — four nationwide networks, 20 local stations, dozens of overseas broadcasts. Switch on television and two choices in three are BBC.

The BBC was never so lovable as in the good old days when broadcasting was a blithe and carefree thing.

It broadcast Beatrice Harrison scraping her cello all alone under a damp Surrey hedge to induce nightingales to sing. It almost tolerated a tipsy announcer who delivered from a Spithead review flagship one of history's funniest broadcasts, largely consisting of the endlessly repeated phrase, "the fleet's lit up."

The BBC's image is still Reith's — Prim, cautious and proper, uplifting and dogoody, a member of the family but not in direct authority.

For the BBC has battled all its life to maintain independence from government control.

Staunchly anti-commercial, it is financed by licences on radio and TV sets. One result is blessedly uninterrupted listening.

Sewer Debat

More than eight weeks of arbitration board hearings into a dispute involving the construction of the Capital Regional Board's northwest sewer trunk line ended last weekend in Victoria.

But regional board lawyer Louis Lindholm said a decision in the complex case is not expected until at least the end of the year.

The dispute is betweeen the regional board and Dillingham Corp. the firm which won the board's contract to build the sewer trunk in the Esquimalt-Marigold area.

Originally the contract was for $2,148,000, but when the line was finished, the corporation asked the board for another $583.000 for extras.

Whether the board should pay this extra $583,000 or some part of it is the question being decided by the arbitration board.

Lindholm said some of the matters in dispute concern the interpretation of the original contract betweeen the board and Dillingham.

Others involve conditions which the firm found in building the sewers which they had not foreseen and which added to the expense involved in the construction.

The basic principle applicable in this area is that if the firm could reasonably have been expected to foresee the difficulties then, the board would not have to pay the extra costs involved.

But if the difficulties were of a kind which could not have been foreseen, then the board would have to pay whatever extra was required to solve them.

Lindholm said that during the hearings, most of which took place in Vancouver, "an immense amount of technical evidence" was given to the board.

The enjoyment came from a capacity audience in Oper Space at the foot of For Street, and was provided b famous pantomime artis Claude St.-Denis. It was one-performance affair, du ing the mime's current Nort American tour.

St-Denis literally gave hi audience everything — includ ing the application of the tra ditional white makeup.

Sewer Line Debate Ends

Board chairman is Vancouver lawyer Boyd Ferris. Members are soils consultant C. W. Brauner and contractor Robert Binnie, both from Vancouver. Lawyer E. C. Chaisson represented Dillingham.

The sewer trunk involved empties into the Macaulay Point outfall, but the construction of the outfall itself is not involved in the arbitration.

Nuns Helped

HOUSTON (UPI) — About 30 elderly Roman Catholic nuns have applied for old age individual payments of about $100 a month, Texas welfare officials said Tuesday.

The nuns, all over 65 and signed to Sacred Heart Convent of the Dominican Sisters. Most of the nuns were teachers in the financially independent convent, but many are now retired or disabled.

Scanner Below Par

Saanich ambulance heart scanning equipment is working at 75 per cent of its capacity, said Saanich fire chief Harold Gains Tuesday.

The regular Saanich ambulance was involved in an accident with a car at Douglas and Courtney Monday while taking a patient to Victoria General Hospital. The equipment had to be transferred to a van until the ambulance is repaired.

Gains said most of the heart scanning or telemetry equipment is in the van now, but the heart scans cannot be transmitted to the Royal Jubilee Hospital. It is not possible to transmit without major modifications to the van and equipment.

However, the ambulance crew can read the scanning and is trained to interpret it, he said. If crew members are in doubt as to whether to move a patient after checking his heart scannings they can phone the hospital for advice.

Gains said the temporary ambulance was sent out to check the equipment and received a call to take a 67-year-old woman suffering from a heart attack to hospital.

"So it was actually checked on a real case," said Gains.

He said the regular ambulance which sustained about $1,000 worth of damage would take about a week to repair.

The patient, Irene Fennell of 3498 Lovat, Saanich, who was being taken to hospital at the time of the accident was in fairly good condition Tuesday night.

Dow Jones Close: 1,003.16

Wall Street History Made

AP, UPI

NEW YORK — In a surge that put Nov. 14, 1972 into the history books of Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average pushed through the fabled 1,000 mark Tuesday with room to spare.

The closing average was 1,003.16, up 6.09. The previous record high was 997.51, set Monday. The lowest closing average was a mere 28.48, set Aug. 8, 1896.

For 88 years, the Dow Jones industrial average has been a keystone indicator of the 30 strongest "blue chip" stocks. Tuesday was the first time it ever closed over 1,000, although it had passed 1,000 six times previously (four times Monday) in the middle of the day, only to slip back before the New York Stock Exchange closed at 3 p.m.

More-broadly-based market indicators have been anticipating the Dow's feat by topping out at new highs for several weeks.

The New York Stock Exchange's index of more than 1,400 common stocks hit 62.52 on Nov. 3 and cracked through that top Tuesday by gaining .54 to 62.94.

Standard and Poor's index of 500 stocks, also on Nov. 3, rolled to a top of 114.22, and broke it Tuesday by closing at 114.95.

The American Stock Exchange's all-time closing high was 33.25 Dec. 16, 1968. Tuesday it closed at 26.11, up .02.

Most investment experts agreed that the 1,000 mark was a psychological barrier, but on the floor of the exchange at the corner of Wall Street and Broad, jubilant brokers cheered and waved when the one-minute-to-go gong sounded and the average was still above 1,000.

The traders on the floor waved at photographers and television cameramen recording the moment from visitors galleries and the floor of the exchange was jammed.

Physcologically or not, many in the financial community heralded it as a harbinger of good things to come.

William Freund, an economist and vice president of the New York Stock Exchange, said, "I think it's merely a reflection of the basic strength and soundness of the American economy. And I'm delighted."

Another expert, Ralph Denunzio, a former chairman of the NYSE board of governors and now a vice president of Kidder Peabody, said: "I'm delighted. I think it's a real milestone, one that may give confidence to the public regarding the equity market. I think it reflects the removal of a lot of uncertainties . . . Like the election and administration policies. The economy looks good. I'm most optimistic."

Many observers foresaw a return of the small investor into the marketplace.

"While I think the Dow is a misleading average, because of its public acceptance, the fact its industrial went over and stayed over 1,000 has big psychological importance," said Bill Donaldson of the Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette investment house. "I think it will help in re-establishing public confidence and interest in the market. The economy at this point, looks very good."

I. W. Burnham of Burnham and Co., said, "the current strong actvity indicates the public is moving back to the market. And their buying style is changing, with interest in utilities, oils, issues with low-price earning ratios and good dividends . . ."

The Dow Jones industrial average was inaugurated on May 26, 1896 by Charles Henry Dow, founder of Dow Jones and Co. The original average was derived by adding together the prices of 11 "representative" stocks and dividing the sum by the number of parts.

Today, the Dow Jones averages no longer correspond to the dollar-per-share prices of individual stocks. The modern DJIA is computed by totalling the closing price of one share of each of 30 stocks for the day and dividing the sum by the divisor in effect at the time. The divisor is periodically revised to take into account changes in the value of stocks due to splits.

Of the original list of stocks, only two are still used in computing the Dow Jones average: American Tobacco (now known as American Brands) and General Electric.

All 30 Blue-Chippers

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 stocks comprises the following issues:

Allied Chemical Corp.; Aluminum Co. of America, American Brands, Inc.; American Can Co.; American Telephone and Telegraph Co.; Anaconda Co.; Bethlehem Steel Corp.; Chrysler Corp.; E. I. du Pont de Nenours and Co.; Eastman Kodak Co.; General Electric Co.; General Foods Corp.; General Motors Corp.; Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.; International Harvester Co.; International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.; International Paper Co.; Johns-Manville Corp., Owen-Illinois, Inc.; Proctor and Gamble Co.; Sears, Roebuck and Co.; Standard Oil Co., of California; Exxon Corp. (formerly Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey); Swift and Co.; Texaco Inc.; Union Carbide Corp.; United Aircraft Corp.; United States Steel Corp.; Westinghousee Electric Corp. and F. W. Woolworth Co.

Trading in Gold Futures World First for Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — A trading bell will ring at 10 a.m. CST today on the floor of the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange to launch the world's first gold futures market.

While there are other gold markets where forward purchases are available — that is, an agreement to buy a set amount for a set price at a specified future date—none provide facilities for trading in and out of a contract without the necessity of physical gold delivery.

All trading will be in terms of United States funds with a minimum trading unit of 400 fine ounces, covered by a bank certificate providing for delivery of gold on request at Toronto.

Deficit Grows

Merchandise Slows In Export Fields

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's balance of payments from July to September produced a $408 million current account deficit on a seasonally-adjusted basis, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

It was the largest quarterly deficit since 1959 and "a sharp rise" from the $17-million deficit during the second quarter of this year.

On an unadjusted basis, however, the balance of payments showed a $3 million surplus.

The seasonally adjusted figures are designed to show the longer-term trend, by removing normal seasonal variations.

The balance of payments shows the net result of inflows and outflows of money for imports, exports, purchase of services, investments, dividends and other financial transfers. It affects the international value of the Canadian dollar.

Statistics Canada said a major factor in the deficit was a substantial drop in Canada's merchandise trade surplus.

In unadjusted figures, this was $165 million during the third quarter of this year, down from $391 million the previous quarter and $600 million a year earlier.

The government statistics-gathering agency said the declining merchandise-trade surplus was due to "sluggishness" of Canadian goods in foreign markets and greater-than-usual demand by a livelier Canadian economy for foreign goods.

Stalemate in Ottawa Stalls Trade Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks between the United States and Canada on the future of the auto pact have been postponed indefinitely because of the political situation in Canada, informed sources said Tuesday.

However, officials of the two countries will get together in Washington at the end of this month to talk about world trade, it was disclosed.

A trade department spokesman said the agenda of the coming meeting has not been finally settled, nor has the makeup of the Canadian delegation, though it may be headed by a deputy minister.

The trade department spokesman said there are no immediate plans for the resumption of talks on Canada-U.S. trade differences. The talks, which have been adjourned in deadlock since February, were to have resumed about this time.

However, the inconclusive result of the Oct. 30 federal election which left the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives tied with 108 seats each, has raised doubts about the strength of the Canadian negotiating position and forced a postponement.

Prime Minister Trudeau said Nov. 2 that his Liberal government will not enter into any binding agreements until it has received a vote of confidence in the House of Commons.

Hijack Move 'Successful'

FBI Chief Ordered Firing

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The acting director of the FBI said here Tuesday that the controversial decision to shoot out the tires on a hijacked Southern Airways jetliner Saturday in Orlando, Fla., was his decision.

"It was obvious that the crew and passengers were under considerable tension," he said, noting that the plane had made six landings in the United States, one in Toronto and one in Cuba before the tires were shot out.

Gray said the action was successful in that it "caused the plane to land and the passengers to be released." He said the hijackers planned to take the plane to Switzerland or Africa and their destination was impossible with the tires shot out. The plane eventually landed a second time in Cuba, where the passengers and and crew were released.

"I made the decision to abort the flight with the full concurrence of Southern Airways," acting director Patrick Gray said at a news conference Tuesday.

"I elected the means to do it," Gray said, adding that airline officials concurred because of the "risk" involved.

Gray was asked about reports that the shooting order originated with President Nixon, who was at his residence in Key Biscayne, Fla., at the time.

"False," Gray replied. "I didn't even talk with President Nixon."

Terrorism: 'Define it' UN Told

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The powerful African bloc Tuesday expressed opposition to any UN action against international terrorism without first carefully defining what the word means.

Speaking for the bloc, Mohamed Sahnoun of Algeria, assistant secretary of the Organization of African Unity told UN correspondents:

"No document can come out without making it really very clear what terrorism is. The international community would prevent certain acts of terror, but first it must define terrorism."

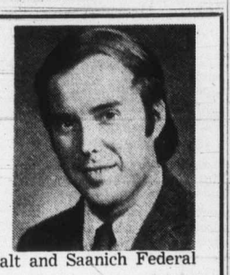

African and Arab countries fear that anti-terrorist action by the international community would be directed against the national liberation movements they support—notably in opposition to Portugal, South Africa and Israel.

Wills Considering Offer from Japan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maury Wills, a baseball free agent after 14 years as a major league shortstop, said Tuesday he is considering an offer to play baseball in Japan next season, but would prefer to join a United States major-league club as a player-coach.

Wills confirmed that he has been negotiating with Nankai Hawks of Japan, but denied he had reached any agreement.

Wills, 40, who set a major-league record in 1962 by stealing 104 bases, was put on waivers by Los Angeles Dodgers several weeks ago after spending most of the 1972 season on the bench. No other team picked him up, presumably because of the requirement that they match 80 per cent of his $100,000 Dodger contract for 1972.

Wills said he is interested in coaching a major-league team, but no offers have been made.

Wills said Nankai Hawks talked to him about coaching, but he told them he wants to play and may consider serving as a player-coach.

The Hawks have one American coach, former major-league infielder Don Blasingame.

Coach Makes Difference In West-United Victory

By MAX LOW

Wily Ron Thompson pushed the panic button Tuesday night.

Thompson's the playing-coach who doesn't want to play "unless there's an emergency."

He watched from the bench at Royal Athletic Park until things had reached the critical stage.

That was at half-time after the younger Victoria Gorge Molsons team had outhustled and outmuscled Thompson's Victoria West-United squad in their first Pacific Coast Soccer League meeting of the season.

At that stage, United had been lucky to manage a 1-1 draw.

Then Thompson stepped onto the field, and things began to happen as he stirred his club to a thrilling 3-2 victory.

The crowd was disappointingly small — only 341 — but those who came saw some great soccer.

Included was one of the prettiest goals seen at the park for many a season.

It came 17 minutes into the second half when Thompson sent over a lovely chip shot and goalkeeper Graham Lee jumped up to take the ball.

At the same time, George Pakos soared up gracefully and headed the ball past Lee's hands and through an incredibly small space between the goalkeeper and the post into the corner of the net.

That was the one that mattered. It was the 3-1 goal. The decider. It was also the sixth goal for Pakos in four matches, and it capped an exciting performance by a player who has recently moved up from the Victoria and District League.

Thompson's uplifting effect on United was instantaneous, and he gave the team the 2-1 goal only eight minutes into the second half when he hammered in a good pass from Pakos.

The young Gorge players were at their best in the first half, and yet it was their opponents who went ahead at the 32-minute mark when Stu Taylor slammed a shot past Lee.

But United held that lead for less than a minute when Howie Anderson's header failed to clear and George Hyne trickled the ball past goalkeeper Ash Douglas and into the net, via the goal post.

Boudrias Boosts Canucks With Two-Goal Performance

Vancouver Canucks may be in revolt, but it was the Detroit Red Wings they almost overthrew on Tuesday night.

Led by Andre Boudrias, reported to be one of the leaders of a dissident group unhappy with the coaching demands of Vic Stasiuk, Canucks scrapped back from a three-goal deficit to gain a 3-3 tie.

The 29-year-old Boudrias, who scored 52 goals in his first two season with the Canucks, had only one this season in his first 15 games, many of which saw him as a part-time player. But he came through with two scoring shots Tuesday, the last one bringing his team all the way back.

Boudrias got his team untracked late in the first period when he deflected the puck past Roy Edwards after a shot by Jocelyn Guevremont.

The goal came just in time to keep the sellout crowd, announced at the usual 15,570 but suspected of being considerably higher, from getting too restive. Wings had seemed to be in complete charge of disorganized opposition after Ron Stackhouse scored at 8:40 with a quick slap shot from just inside the blue line.

Guy Charron and Al Karlander followed with scoring shots and a rout appeared in the making until Boudrias scored.

Rookie Don Lever shoved the puck under Edwards late in the second period and Boudrias got the 3-3 goal on a power-play, beating Edwards early in the third period with a 25-foot blast.

Tonight's game between Atlanta and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8, starting at 5 o'clock.

Canucks made a big bid for the second point, but Edwards made brilliant stops on Richard Lemieux and Guevremont.

The result moved both clubs up a notch in the National Hockey League's East Division.

Meanwhile, Montreal Canadiens continued to roll on, boosting their lead to seven points by wearing down the stubborn New York Islanders, 7-2, in New York.

The first-season club, winners only twice in 14 games, started the third period at 1-3, then jolted Canadiens out of their complacency when Ron Stewart, acquired earlier in the day from New York Rangers, scored on a power play at 1:59.

Lemaire Pads Lead

Jacques Lemaire, playing Tuesday night despite a painful wrist injury, scored once and assisted on another goal to boost his lead in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Lemaire got his 15th goal to move three points ahead of runners-up Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers and Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo. The Montreal centre suffered the injury on Saturday night against Los Angeles Kings but played in Canadiens' 7-2 victory Tuesday against New York Islanders.

Lemaire holds the goal-scoring lead by two over Buffalo's Richard Martin and Perreault, Martin's linemate, leads in assists with 18.

Canadiens' Yvan Cournoyer jumped into the top 10 on the scoring list with a three-point output Tuesday. Cournoyer gained his ninth and 10th assists to share ninth spot with four other players.

Stan Mikita of Chicago and Johnny Bucyk of Boston share fourth place with 24 points each while three players, Dennis Hull of Chicago, Brad Park of Rangers and Ralph Backstrom of Kings, are tied for sixth.

Bryan Watson of Pittsburgh Penguins is the most-penalized player with 48 minutes in penalties, one minute more than Dave Schultz of Philadelphia Flyers.

Ken Dryden of Montreal, who allowed two goals to the Islanders, lost the goalkeeping lead to Gilles Villemure of the Rangers. They were tied with 1.75 goals-against averages going into Tuesday's play.

Winnipeg Jets scored the most lop-sided win of the world Hockey Association on Tuesday against Los Angeles.

Jets broke a tie for first place in the Western Division by drubbing the Sharks, 8-0, behind the goalkeeping of Ernie Wakely and the scoring of Christian Bordeleau and defenceman Larry Hornung. Wakely needed only 24 saves to record his first WHA shutout.

Bordeleau scored his 12th and 13th goals, both in the first period when Jets roared to a 4-0 lead, and picked up an assist on one of Hornung's two goals. Coach Bobby Hull scored his third WHA goal and got two assists to give him eight points in five games.

Minnesota Fighting Saints exploded for three goals in the final 96 seconds to score a 5-3 triumph over Cleveland Crusaders, leaders in the Eastern Division.

In a game between two division trailers, Philadelphia Blazers edged Chicago Cougars, 4-3.

Claremont Harriers Triumph

Richard Kirkham of Oak Bay, Tuesday, won his seventh straight race in the Victoria High School Cross Country League.

But Kirkham's effort was overshadowed by a brilliant team performance by Claremont which placed runners second, third and fourth in the boys' race and first and second in the girls' event to win both team contests for the first time in seven meets.

Kirkham, defending B.C. high school champion, raced to victory in the fast time of 21 minutes anl 12 seconds over four miles.

But 250 yards behind with a time of 21:59 was George Brandstetter of Claremont with schoolmates Kevin Hunter and Mike Hobson third and fourth.

Jill McLeod of Claremont won the 2.2-mile girls' race in 14 minutes and 27 seconds with teammate Michelle Brownsey second and Nancy Griffin of Mt. Douglas third.

Bugner Wins

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Joe Bugner, England's European heavyweight boxing champion, hammered Tony Doyle's left eye shut with a two-fisted barrage and stopped him at the end of the eighth round of a scheduled 10-round bout Tuesday.

Burnaby North Rated As Soccer Favorites

Burnaby North Vikings are hot favorites to win the third annual B.C. high school soccer championship to be played in Victoria Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Vikings won the inaugural championship in Victoria in 1970 and were runners-up last year to Victoria Tyees. The Tyees didn't make it into this season's tourney.

Only three schools — Burnaby North, North Delta and Abbotsford — have been in all three championships.

Oak Bay Bays and Belmont Braves are Victoria's hopes in the 12-team tourney and the Upper Island representative is Max Cameron Secondary School of Powell River.

The tournament, played during the day at Centennial Stadium and another University of Victoria field and at night in Royal Athletic Park, is held in four three-team sections.

Each school plays two games and the team with the best record in the four divisions go on to the semi-finals which will be played on Friday night. The final is at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The Bays, winners of both the Victoria High School Soccer League title and the Colonist Cup, appear to have a good chance of at least making it into the semi-finals. They are drawn in a group with Vernon, the Okanagan champion, and Vancouver Technical College, third-ranked school from the Vancouver area.

Braves have a tough start in the tournament's opening game when they meet the strong North Delta Huskies at 9 a.m. Thursday at Centennial Stadium. Castlegar is the other school in the division.

Burnaby North, which recently won its fourth straight Burnaby-New Westminster-North Shore League championship, is in a group with Powell River and Abbotsford.

The fourth section contains Steveston Packers, undefeated winners of the Vancouver League, Mt. Elizabeth Secondary of Kitimat and Selkirk Secondary of Kimberley.

Canuck Directors To Stand Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Scallen and Lyman Walters, top management of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, were committed for trial Tuesday on charges of theft and issuing a false prospectus.

Scallen is president and Walters is vice-president of Medical Investment Corp. Ltd. of Minneapolis, which controls the Canucks through a 60-per-cent holding in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., immediate parent company of the Canucks. Both hold similar positions with Northwest Sports.

Scallen was committed for trial on a charge of theft of $3 million by converting the money from Northwest Sports to Medicor, and on a charge of issuing a false prospectus, to induce the public to purchase shares in Northwest Sports.

Walters was committed for trial on a charge of issuing a false prospectus.

Scallen and Walters both elected trial by judge and jury when they appeared before provincial court judge David Moffett on Sept. 18. Judge Moffett ordered that evidence taken at the preliminary hearing not be published.

They were charged Feb. 22 after an investigation by the British Columbia Securities Commission. Results of the investigation were turned over to Vancouver lawyer Ray Paris by then-attorney-general Leslie Peterson in October, 1971.

The preliminary hearing was long delayed, with the defence winning a series of adjournment before the hearing finally began. The adjournments were protested by Mr. Paris.

No date for a trial has been set.

Edmonton Oil Kings missed a chance Tuesday to move into the lead in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Brandon Wheat Kings withstood a last-minute power-play effort to hand the visiting Oil Kings a 5-4 loss before 1453 fans. Brandon's Rick Piche was called for holding at 18:46 and Edmonton pulled goalkeeper Doug Soetaert for a sixth attacker in the final 60 seconds. Wayne Wilhelm in the Brandon nets came up with a save on a shot by Darcy Rota, trying for his third goal, and then stopped Fred Comrie on the rebound.

Wilhelm also stopped John Rogers on a penalty shot at 16:15 of the final period with Wheat Kings holding a 5-3 lead.

New Westminster Bruins, leading the Western Division by one point, dropped a 4-2 decision to the Tigers in Medicine Hat, leaving the door open for the Oil Kings.

Lanny McDonald, Tom Lysiak and Boyd Anderson, the top line in the WCHL, accounted for all the Tiger scoring. Mcdonald had two goals and Lysiak and Anderson had a goal each. Despite the loss, Bruins' Terry Richardson was outstanding in goal, kicking out 39 shots. Jerry Thomas made 37 saves for Tigers.

Saskatoon Blades overhauled Brandon to gain a share of the Eastern Division lead, downing Vancouver Nats, 6-2. The victory extended Blades' unbeaten streak to seven games and was their fifth straight win.

Meanwhile, Regina Pats snapped a winless string at nine games, posting a 7-6 win over Winnipeg Jets before 1088 spectators in Regina. The game was tied four times before Dennis Sobchuk's second power-play goal, at 17:11 of the final period, closed out the scoring.

Pro Track Circuit Eying NFL Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Amateur stars Jim Ryun, Bob Seagren, Lee Evans and Randy Matson turned professional Tuesday as the nucleus of a track and field circuit that plans 48 meets next year in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Richmond Flowers of the National Football League's New York Giants, a former hurdles star at the University of Tennessee, also signed a contract, it was announced by the new International Track Association.

"We plan 24 to 30 events in North America," said Michael O.Haara, president of the new International Track Association, "and about 15 more in Europe.

The ITA format calls for up to 48 meets with basic purses of $10,800 each. There are to be two meets a week, one each on Saturday and Sunday, in cities that are close to one another.

"We will sign five athletes for each of 12 championship events," O'Hara said. "At each meet, the winner of an event will receive $500 with $250 for second, $100 for third and $50 for fourth."

Ryun said it had been projected to him that "a good year could be worth $18,000 and up at the beginning. That might not seem huge, but it is when you've been earning zero."

The former Kansas University world record holder in the mile said he foresees, "possible great financial benefits, as long as your name is hot in the news, in such areas as endorsements and commercials."

O'Hara said that Flowers, who makes an estimated $25,000 yearly in the National Football League, "contacted us about running since track was his first sports love."

The ITA president said he was, however, "treading cautiously in talking deals with pro football players. We want to play ball with the clubs and the NFL.

"But, for sure, we are interested in such people as Bob Hayes, Paul Warfield, Mercury Morris, Earl McCullogh and Jimmy Hines, who were track heroes as well as good football players."

O'Hara released a partial 1973 schedule which included Albuquerque, N.M., March 23; Los Angeles, March 24; Fort Worth, Tex., April 6; Baltimore, April 14; Chicago, May 4; Atlanta, May 5; Philadelphia, May 11; Pittsburgh, May 12; Vancouver, May 18; San Diego, May 19; Louisville, Ky., June 1; Richmond, Va., June 2; Long Island, N.Y., June 9.

He said ITA meets are also to be scheduled for New York, Orlando, Fla., Oakland, Cleveland, Seattle, Dallas, Toronto and Montreal.

Alec Merriman

Sports fishermen cheer the announcement made last week by Environment Minister Jack Davis that he will impose strict condition on herring fishing in 1973, but commercial herring fishermen plan to continue the battle for more herring fishing.

They have invited Davis to attend a protest meeting scheduled in Vancouver for 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Last week in a press release, Davis announced a herring catch of 50,000 tons for 1973; no herring fishery in the Strait of Georgia between Campbell River and Victoria except for minor food and bait fishing under licence; and a limit on herring fishing vessels to the number which participated in the fishery in a major way during the 1971-72 season.

Union fishermen have voiced strong objection to all three conservation measures.

The union accuses Davis of announcing the regulations without consultation with the fishermen's herring advisory committee and call his move a "political decision, motivated from organized commercial sports groups."

The term "organized commercial sports fishermen" is one often used by UFAWU president Homer Stevens, and refers to men like marina-operator Bob Wright and Brentwood fishing guide and tackle manufacturer Jim Gilbert, who have been vocal in support of conservation measures and sports fishermen's rights.

Wright and Gilbert are only two of the many who are working for conservation of the fisheries resource. In the Lower Island Amalgamated Conservation Society more than 14 clubs are represented, spearheaded by conservationists like Bob Rogerson, Brian Inglis, Howard English, Al Playfair, Jack King, Al Wright, and many others who have absolutely no commercial interest.

Stevens is just using a catchy term to try to cloud the issues, and he does it when he has his back to the wall.

It is too bad he chooses this time to renew his attacks, because other commercial fishermen and sportsmen have been truly getting together in the interests of conservation.

In his press release Davis explained there has been a ban on herring fishery for reduction purposes since 1968, when stocks declined. In the past two years there has been a limited food fishery under quota.

Last year there was quite a sizeable fishery for herring roe to be shipped to Japan . . . and the waste of herring carcasses from that operation was deplorable and simply unbelievable.

Last year the actual herring taken fell just short of 50,000 tons.

This year the fishermen want a bigger quota, and point out that department of fisheries biological and administrative staff say "a quota of 105,000 tons would be within the framework of sound conservation policy." They also went to fish the Gulf of Georgia and object to limitations on the number of boats allowed to fish for herring.

The UFAWU in a press release states that before Davis imposed the new 50,000-ton quota, advisors had already stated their support for the larger quota. In earlier years, the production averaged 200,000 tons. Only when production went up to 265,000 tons was there any decline of stocks."

The release also notes that "for 10 years prior to decline of the herring industry, the union fishermen protested the reckless increase in production quotas, without success. The department went ahead anyway, ignoring the fishermen."

We know that to be a correct statement, having had several discussions with Homer Stevens during which concern was expressed about declining herring stocks.

The commercial sports fishermen were on common ground when they called for a cutback on herring fishing before stocks were fished out.

Only the industry officials and the biologists were for more herring fishing.

Biologists told sports fishermen that herring stocks couldn't be fished out . . . and before they were persuaded otherwise the stocks nearly were fished out. And salmon stocks diminished simultaneously.

The issue is that when herring stocks are down so is salmon fishing when herring stocks are up there is plenty of food for the salmon and salmon fishing — sports and commercial — improves.

Now the commercial herring fishermen point to the new assurance of biologists that a bigger quota is practical and accuse Davis of "super caution with the same old attitudes of ignoring fishermen."

What is wrong with caution? The biologists were wrong before . . . and they could be wrong again.

Proposed Puck Series Stalemated

NEW YORK (AP) — President Clarence Campbell's announcement that the proposed series between a touring Russian team and four National Hockey League clubs has, for the moment at least, fallen through is the latest twist in hockey's cold war with the Communist world.

Campbell said Monday that current negotiations between the NHL and the Soviets have been suspended and that he has cancelled a scheduled trip to Moscow next weekend that was to wrap up final details.

"I think some obstacles have been placed in their way," said Campbell. "Negotiations have been halted and as of now, there is a stalemate."

Campbell did not rule out a renewal of negotiations.

"We'll expect some explanation and verification from them if they desire to continue negotiations," Campbell said.

The NHL's relations with the Russians have been extremely sensitive ever since September's series between Team Canada and the Soviet national squad.

That eight-game set was replete with problems but in the midst of it, the Russians expressed interest in a possible return series against several NHL clubs.

Campbell pursued the idea and it seemed set for January. Then, suddenly came a stumbling block—unidentified by Campbell—that appears to have scuttled the plans.

Campbell did not name the problem but hinted that it involved the International Ice Hockey Federation. Russia is a member of the federation which requires consent of the countries involved before sanctioning an international competition.

"The NHL won't ask for consent on behalf of another party," Campbell said. From that, it would seem that the Russians had asked the NHL to intercede in their behalf with the IIHF.

That leaves the proposed series up in the air. At least one NHL general manager is sorry that the negotiations seem at a dead end.

"I thought we might get an opportunity to play them," said Emile Francis, general manager-coach of New York Rangers. "I was looking forward to it."

In Calgary, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president Joe Kryczka said he could have told Mr. Campbell "quite a while ago" that the series could not take place without CAHA participation.

"There certainly was no way that series was going to come off because I had been advised the Russians wouldn't play, unless the series went through proper channels."

By that, he meant, working with the CAHA and the United States Amateur Hockey Association. Both are members of the IIHF.

Kryczka also referred to a letter he received Nov. 2 from the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation which indicate there "would be no series."

"The Russians feel they have heavy commitments within their own structure, plus preparations for the 1973 world championship in Moscow."

Denver Withdraws Bid

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Olympic Organizing Committee, Tuesday, formally withdrew its invitation to host the 1976 Winter Olympics. A citizens group, however, continued to look for alternate funding to keep them.

The DOOC passed a resolution withdrawing its invitation to the International Olympic Committee to host the games last week after Colorado voters solidly passed a proposal cutting off public funding.

The citizens group obtained a temporary restraining order to keep the DOOC from forwarding its withdrawal until this week.

"We do not want to do anything to prejudice the efforts of the citizens committee trying to retain the games, however, we also have an obligation to inform the USOC and the IOC of recent developments and the actions we have taken," said Carl N. de Temple, DOOC president and general secretary said.

De Temple also said the DOOC was liquidating its assets and preparing to wind up its business.

"In so doing, de Temple said, "we are preparing a report that will reflect our activities up to this time.

"Any such report, of course, will be a matter of public record and available for future reference by the International Olympic Committee or others who may be interested."

At Lausanne, Switzerland, Lord Michael Killanin, IOC president, and his three vice presidents met to discuss the future of the Winter Games and review informal offers by Lake Placid, N.Y., and Innsbruck, Austria to host them.

"There is no statement today and we are not sure if the meeting will go on Wednesday," an IOC spokesman said.

The spokesman declined to comment on whether the IOC chiefs discussed the possibility of abolishing the Winter Games altogether.

Attorney Harry Arkin of Denver, head of the Colorado Citizens to Retain the Winter Games, asked Killanin to allow the 1976 Olympics to remain at Denver.

He said the games could be funded through private donations.

Killanin said the IOC would delay an announcement on a final decision until it received Denver's formal withdrawal.

President Clifford Buck of the USOC said at Denver he did not think the games would remain in Colorado. He added he doubted the IOC would name another American city to host them.

Trevino Fined For Violation

NEW YORK (AP) — Golfer Lee Trevino was slapped with an $850 fine Tuesday for walking out of the Sahara invitation tournament last month and criticizing officials.

Joseph C. Dey, Jr., commissioner of the Professional Golfers Association Tournament Players Division, announcing the fine, said punishment of the popular former United States open champion and reigning British Open king was softened because of Trevino's attitude.

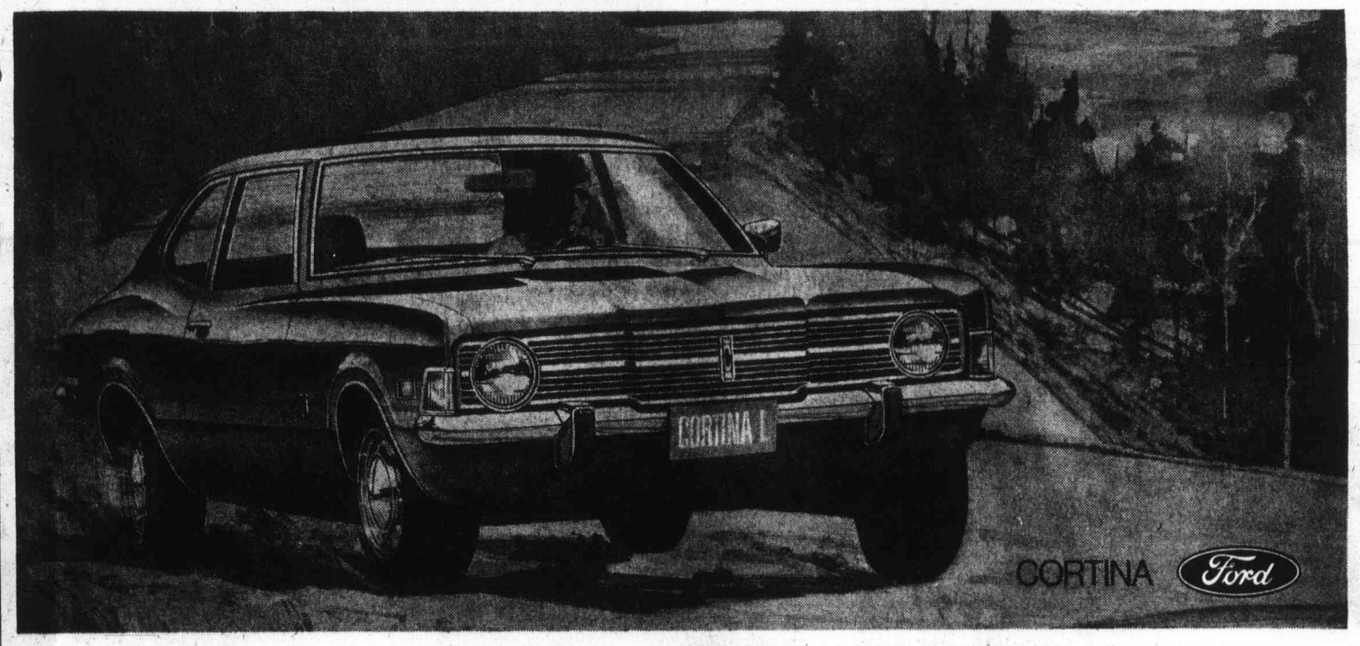

"The extent of the penalty for this major violation of tournament regulations was influenced not only by the fact that Mr. Trevino was the defending champion but, in mitigation, by his prompt and unqualified apology to tournament officials," Dey said in his formal release.

Trevino picked up his ball and walked off the course after playing nine holes of the third round in the Sahara tournament at Las Vegas, Oct. 28.

He had first complained that he was weary from too much tournament play but later took a blast at the slow play of the tournament.

Afterward, Trevino apologized and publicly announced that he felt he was wrong and was deserving of some sort of punishment.

WE HAD A LOT TO CONSIDER WHEN WE BUILT CORTINA

Potholes, ruts, rust, rain, ice, snow, wet roads, dry roads, unexpected stops, parking lot bumps, sudden curves, and anything else an economy import might come up against in Canada.

We did our best to make Cortina tough enough to handle any hardships Canada could dish out. And come out ahead.

To handle the roughest roads, Cortina has a Short and Long Arm front suspension, designed for a quieter ride and improved handling. The traditional rear leaf springs are replaced by a 4-bar link system. It controls the location of the rear axle during cornering, virtually eliminating any tendency to "axle hop".

To handle high-speed highway driving, Cortina has a 2-litre Overhead Camshaft engine. It has plenty of torque for quick acceleration and effortless freeway cruising, without sacrificing economy. And in the city, where driving is often stop-and-go, Cortina's power front disc brakes give straight, fast stops.

There's a new energy-absorbing bumper system. In the front it consists of a heavy steel bumper, a full-width steel reinforcement behind the bumper, large mounting brackets and two Ford Motor Company designed impact-absorbing devices mounted to the front of the frame.

And to resist the salt-soaked slush that causes rust Cortina's body has a special rust resisting electro-coated phosphate undercoating.

Those are just some of the features built into every Cortina to handle the rigorous driving conditions it might come up against in Canada.

On the inside, we had a different set of priorities. Comfort and convenience.

The fully reclining front bucket seats were scientifically designed to give increased lumbar and lateral support.

The fitted loop-pile carpeting, not only adds a luxury touch to Cortina, but also acts as a sound insulation against road noise.

The convenient front and rear grab handles were designed to assist entry and exit.

And there's an electric rear window defroster, to keep the frost off on cold winter mornings.

In short, we built everything into Cortina that would make it a tough and durable little car, with all the comfort you want.

And with nearly everything already standard, the list of options is very short. There's the silk-smooth 3-speed automatic transmission and the dealer installed radio. And that's all.

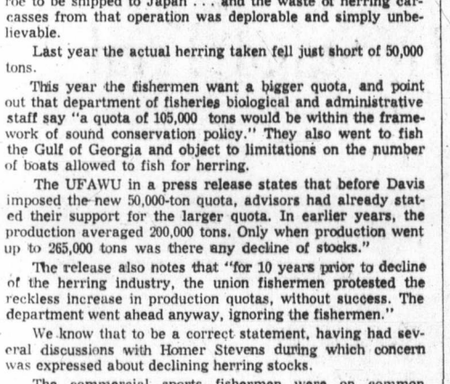

Test drive the 2- or 4-door sedans or the sporty 2-door GT. You'll find we considered a lot when we built Cortina, and it all adds up to a better car for you.

Cortina. Consider it.

Jobless Payout Dips

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance benefit payments totalled $128.1 million in September, down 11 per cent from the unusually-high total of $143.8 million in August, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The September payments bring to more than $1.4 billion the total benefits paid out so far this year. The government announced during the recent election campaign it had obtained a governor-general's warrant for an additional $234 million to ensure plenty of cash to pay benefits until Parliament can vote more funds.

Drink Dispenser Polio Cause?

GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — A federal health official said a contaminated drink dispenser in a Daycroft school locker room may have caused an outbreak of polio at the school last month.

It was disclosed Tuesday that the fruit juice dispenser, equipped with a spray cooling system similar to those found in commercial establishments, may have been the common source for the 11 polio cases originating at the school.

Dr. Dewayne Andrews, a federal epidemiologist assigned to the state health department, said the spray arm in the dispenser was broken, causing students to mix the juice with a stick or their hands.

Two communal cups used by boys on the school's football and soccer teams may also have been the source of the polio virus, Andrews said.

Andrews was still uncertain how the virus reached the school campus nor was he sure how many of the 11 cases stemmed from the boys' locker room at the Christian Science-affiliated school.

None of the students at the school located on the former campus of the Rosemary Hall school, had received polio immunization because of religious beliefs.

Mother, 19, Not Guilty: Insanity

CALGARY (CP) — A 19-year-old mother charged with manslaughter following the death last July of her 17-month-old son was found not guilty Tuesday by reason of insanity at the time of the offence.

In making the ruling, Mr. Justice Harold Riley placed Marilyn Gaetann Fisher in the custody of the lieutenant-governor in a place and manner of his direction, after hearing evidence from a psychiatrist that, while she is emotionally disturbed, she is not psychotic and does not require incarceration.

Riley, lacking the authority to discharge the woman made the recommendation that her defence counsel place the matter before the provincial board of review, which investigates such cases.

Stolen Art Worth $1 Million

BAGNOLS - SUR - CEZE France (UPI) — Police said Tuesday they expect the thieves who stole 15 paintings worth an estimated $1 million from the local museum Sunday to try to negotiate a ransom in exchange for their return.

The paintings, including works by Matisse, Cezanne and Renoir, were missed Monday when a guard discovered the theft. Museum officials estimated the total value of the missing works at $1 million.

Police said important information has been obtained concerning the thieves' whereabouts, but they refused to reveal what this information was.

Marcos Pledges Search

MANILA (UPI) — President Ferdinand Marcos said Tuesday his government hopes to find several Second World War Japanese stragglers who may be hiding in Philippine jungles.

Marcos made the statement at a meeting with a Japanese team searching for a former Japanese Imperial Army lieutenant, identified as Hiro Onoda, who was last sighted on Lubang Island, 70 miles southwest of Manila.

Marcos said if the Japanese search team pulls out, the Philippine government will continue the operations.

Parents Suing Teachers Next?

Parents may soon be suing incompetent teachers for malpractice.

That was the warning given to a Greater Victoria school board committee Tuesday night by trustee Dr. Philip Ney.

"A teacher who leaves a child with a learning disability" could be sued by a parent just as a doctor who leaves a child with a limp could be sued, Ney told the administration committee.

Ney urged the committee to find out from the board's lawyer whether the district could be liable for a malpractice suit brought against one of its teachers.

The committee agreed to obtain a legal opinion and then to discuss the matter again next month.

Ney suggested that if the board could be liable, it should buy malpractice insurance to protect itself.

It seemed that some schools have far more learning and emotional disturbances than others, Ney said, and he felt that, to a degree, this was the result of teachers' personalities.

It is not impossible that someday a parent could be suing because a child had been seduced by a teacher, Ney pointed out. He said he knew of such cases in other places.

The committee agreed with the general principle that all applicants for teaching positions in the district and those recommended to permanent appointment be given personality tests.

It was emphasized that the object of these tests would be to try to weed out any deviant personalities.

Rigidity Rapped By Curtis

"Using a sledgehammer to kill a flea," was the way Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis Tuesday night described his traffic department's approach to simple problems.

And, he added during a public works committee meeting, he is getting very upset about the rigidity and closed minds within the traffic and engineering department.

They did not seem willing, he said to try different kinds of parking bans such as residential parking only, or 10 or 15-minute parking zones to combat problems caused by day-long parking.

Parking Request

At issue was a request from a McKenzie Avenue resident for residential parking to be allowed outside her home in the 900 Block.

The woman is confined to a wheelchair and has regular visits from a nurse and from Meals on Wheels. All these cars have to park a distance from her home because there is a no-parking zone in front of her house.

Reporting to council on a change from no-parking to residential parking, municipal engineer Bob Daye said enforcement of restricted parking is difficult. Either police time has to be wasted checking the credentials of people parking their cars, or they have to ticket all cars and let the owner fight the ticket.

Traffic Grows

In any case, added the report, with growing traffic on McKenzie there will eventually have to be a ban on parking all the way along the road.

Curtis objected to the report.

"Far too often out of the traffic branch and the engineering department we are dealing with a closed mind, and I am getting very tired of it," said Curtis.

Bans Possible

Parking had been banned in the area, close to Quadra, because of day-long parking by B.C. Telephone and Saanich municipal employees. Daye suggested that parking could be banned during the daytime from Monday to Friday, leaving the area free for evening or weekend visitors.

"I can't see a Saanich policeman ticketing a Meals on Wheels or nurse's vehicle," he added.

"You are asking the police to wink at some vehicles and not at others just because we've received this letter," retorted Curtis.

Other Places

There could be similar problems in other places that council doesn't know anything about, he said.

"The problem is we have built up a rigidity in traffic signs in this municipality and we are not willing to bend, to experiment, to try something new in most cases. I am becoming very concerned about it.

"You ask for consideration of this and that and your suggestions are dismissed summarily by the people at the traffic level and police and I am getting very, very upset about it."

Curtis said the request had been made to find a way of preventing all-day parking by workers in that area, and the answer had been to stop all parking.

"This is using a sledgehammer to kill a flea," he said.

He suggested alternatives and it was decided to recommend to council that residential parking be tried in that area.

In other business the committee asked for a report on the feasibility of connecting the drainage on the east and west sides of Maplewood Road to counteract winter flooding from 3440 to 3530 Maplewood.

It was explained that a new drainage system would have to be paid for by 12 property owners, only four of whom see benefits.

E. W. Hockin, 3510 Maplewood explained that his basement had been flooded three times within four months last winter, putting his furnace out of operation each time.

The committee also decided to recommend that:

- Work be started to provide drainage on Major, Totem and Bethune, at an estimated cost of $32,000;
- Reports on an estimated $70,000 drainage system for Ash-Barrie-Bissenden in the Cordova Bay area be given priority;
- Strawberry Vale school auxiliary be informed that sidewalks for the school area are on the list of proposed sidewalks to be installed during 1973.

Immersion French Class Eyed

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Experimental immersion programs in French may begin in Greater Victoria district schools next September.

The Greater Victoria school board's curriculum committee Tuesday night approved in principle the establishment of at least one voluntary immersion class in French for Grade 7 pupils in the 1973-74 academic year.

A similar program would be established at the Grade 1 level in September, 1974.

However, both programs must be approved by the B.C. education department before they can be implemented.

In the Grade 7 program, all subjects normally taught in English would be taught in French by French - speaking teachers and hopefully students would speak French between classes.

Purpose of the program, according to the committee, would be "to provide students with bilingual capacity."

At least 25 students would be required to establish one pilot class, but no more than 30 would be accepted for it. If 56 or more applications were received and if a second suitable teacher could be found, a second class could be set up.

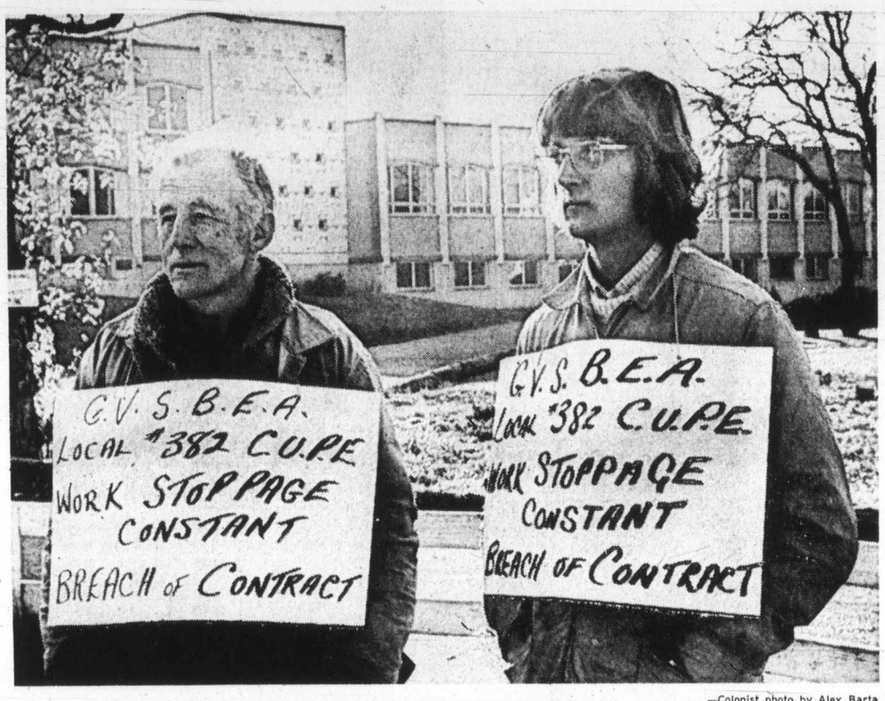

The students would be accepted in the order their applications were received with no prerequisites. Parents would be responsible for providing transportation to the class, but the class would be set up in a school near a bus line.

The program would be restricted to the two Grade 7 classes for at least three years. If a similar Grade 1 class is established, it would be the only one for at least three years.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore said the Grade 7 level had been chosen for the first program because it appeared that suitable teachers and resource personnel were available at that level. However, some trustees felt the program might be more effective if it began at a lower grade.

Some trustees were also concerned over what would happen to the Grade 7 students the following year as they reverted to classes in English.

The district's curriculum department will review the general proposal and present further details to the board later.

Workers Picket, Return

Maintenance men from the Greater Victoria school district were back on the job late Tuesday afternoon after setting up picket lines around the district administration building and maintenance shops for about eight hours earlier in the day.

But union spokesmen and school trustees were still not agreed on the cause of the work stoppage, which had been decided upon by the union during the weekend.

The 30 men, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 382, agreed to return to work about 2 p.m. after their union leaders had met for 1½ hours with district superintendent A. J. Longmore and other school board officials.

Union local president Fred Newell said some areas of disagreement had been resolved at the meeting and a further meeting had been scheduled for next Tuesday.

Newell said cause of the work stoppage had been "constant breaches of the collective agreement, unfair treatment of the workers and threats of dismissals for the slightest cause."

"It was a multitude of things built up over two years," said Newell, all involving what he termed "the dictatorship attitude" taken by the school administration.

But school trustee Peter Bunn said these charges were "nonsense." All CUPE members were well-treated by the administration and had excellent working conditions, he said.

Bunn believed the real cause of the stoppage was a desire by the union to put pressure on the district in its negotiations with the union for a new contract.

Present contract expires Dec. 31.

Newell said, however, that the stoppage had nothing whatsoever to do with the new contract.

The picket lines went up at 7 a.m. Tuesday but picketers said they were for information only and did not try to stop others from going to work.

The picketers said that only the outside maintenance crews were off work and that school janitors, who belong to the same local, had stayed on the job. Secretarial and office staff, members of a different local of CUPE, worked as usual.

Regiment's Museum Collecting Items

Vancouver Island's active militia infantry, the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) is in the process of collecting items for a military museum.

The regiment, which perpetuates the original 16th Canadian Scottish of the First World War, is inviting veterans of both world wars to consider contributing items relating to the regiment to the museum. In charge is the regimental adjutant at Bay Street Armory, Victoria.

Quadra Ramp Opens

The Quadra Street overpass on the Pat Bay Highway will be opened today, the highways department announced Monday.

After today motorists heading north on Quadra and wishing to continue north on the highway will use the ramp at the east end of the overpass.

Southbound traffic on the highway transferring to Quadra will turn right and follow the loop south and west of the overpass. This will lead them up onto the overpass and then to Quadra.

Boarding Homes Probed

Determining the standard of boarding homes with housekeeping facilities is the aim of a survey the Greater Victoria health board wants Victoria to undertake.

The health board wants answers to these questions:

- Are elderly people on fixed incomes forced to live in substandard boarding homes?
- How many landlords are making an effort to keep their premises at a resonable standard?
- How many old people are living in boarding homes without any supervision who should have medical or paramedical care?
- How many hotels are renting substandard units to senior citizens?

The type of accommodation in question should provide for cooking facilities, adequate sanitary facilities, and access to water.

In most cases, according to health board officials, the cooking facilities consist of a hotplate; often the tenants are old people who can no longer use the electric equipment without creating a possible fire hazard, they said.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread told the health board Tuesday that substandard boarding home accommodation can be found in all four core municipalities, but primarily in Victoria proper.

The survey should disclose whether or not landlords paint the premises often enough, refurnish the units at regular intervals and whether or not sanitary facilities are acceptable.

The matter will go before Victoria council after the city's health committee has discussed it.

Wallet, Cash Returned

When you lose a wallet with more than $300 in it these days you don't often get it back — and even if you do, the chances are that it will be empty.

But Mrs. George Deyaeger of Jordan River was lucky.

She was shopping at Woodward's store, 3125 Douglas, Tuesday morning when she found her wallet was missing. She assumed it had been stolen and reported it to Victoria police. It was 11:41 a.m.

Marguerite Chan, of 1142 Balmoral, was also shopping at Woodward's. She found Mrs. Deyaeger's wallet containing $387 on the sidewalk outside and phoned police. It was 11:45 a.m.

Now Mrs. Deyaeger has her wallet and Mrs. Chan has a bouquet of flowers as a thank you.

Germs from Pet Turtles May Poison Food

Nearly all of the turtles sold by Victoria pet shops and major department stores are contaminated with salmonella bacteria which may cause food poisoning, the Greater Victoria health board was told Tuesday.

To get the "dangerous pets" off the market, the health board may ask municipalities to issue business and trade licences to pet shops and department stores only if they undertake not to sell turtles.

Before such a request is made, however, the health board will ask Victoria city solicitor Terry O'Grady for legal advice.

Medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread told members of the board that most of the turtles sold by pet shops and department stores are imported from Mexico where they have been bred in contaminated waters.

He said two years ago the problem was brought to the attention of storekeepers and, for a while, the turtles disappeared from the market.

Now, he said, they were being sold again in substantial quantities.

Whitbread added it was almost impossible to decontaminate the turtles. If it could be done at all, it would cost a great deal of money.

He also said action was being taken by the federal customs department and the provincial agricultural department to draw up regulations that would prohibit the importing of turtles into British Columbia.

'Indices Ignore Quality of Life'

TORONTO (CP) — Sylvia Ostry, chief statistician of Canada, said Monday that federal indicators of unemployment, consumer prices and the gross national product fail to measure the quality of life.

The economic indices, she said, do not indicate the happiness and hardships of the conditions they measure.

Speaking to a combined luncheon meeting of the Canadian Club and the Toronto Business and Professional Women's Club, she said it was not possible "to capture the human condition."

Ostry, who left the Economic Council of Canada to head Statistics Canada, said federal unemployment figures do not measure the hardships of the discouraged or disabled who are not in the working force, or of the working poor.

Infant Anemia May Reappear

CHICAGO (CP — A study reported by the American Medical Association indicates that nutritional anemia—major deficiency disease of childhood—may reappear in early adolescence.

Although the usual peak age for anemia is the second year of life, the study conducted by doctors in New Haven, Conn., reported an increase in cases of anemia in children 10 to 14 years of age, and a significant increase in girls aged 14 to 21, whose bodies are not sufficiently well-nourished to cope with the added stress of menstruation.

The incidence of anemia among Negro girls was higher than that for white or Spanish-speaking girls—21 per cent in the 14 to 21 age group.

The gradual disappearance of anemia after the third year is attributed to a decreased growth rate and the assumption of a more varied diet later in childhood. This "marginal correction" is not sufficient for girls at the beginning of puberty, however, and the anemia reappears.

The authors suggest that there is need for continuing concern regarding the nutritional status of children and young adults in lower socio-economic communities. They recommend that nutrition counselling and iron supplementation be continued into adolescence where necessary.

Shoe Boost Disputed

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian footwear industry denied Monday a charge that prices of women's shoes have jumped by 60 per cent since August, 1971.

The charge was made this month by Keith Dixon, executive vice-president of the Canadian Importers' Association, who said the price increase was a result of anti-dumping duties imposed on women's shoes from Italy and Spain.

Jean-Guy Maheu, executive vice-president of the Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Canada, said in a statement the consumer price index shows a pair of women's shoes bought in August, 1971, before the duties were imposed, for $13.73, sold for $14.34 in August, 1972.

Maheu also denied Dixon's statement that a Canadian buying a typical pair of imported shoes at $20 pays at least $6 in tariff and taxes.

Total tariff and taxes on a pair of shoes selling for $21.95 is $2.84, he said.

Maheu said the special duties are applied only to those Spanish and Italian manufacturers found guilty of dumping by the department of national revenue.

Sale of imported goods at less than market value in the country of origin is considered unfair dumping under Canadian law.

Pressure Cooker Buff

Cook's Gear Goes Everywhere

"Creative cooking is 70 per cent love, 15 per cent inspiration, and 15 per cent organization," says Jean Bayrock, who has had cooking lessons in several countries, has given a few herself, and has even established her own special dishes and methods of making them.

"Cooking and turning out good meals also takes a minimum of good equipment," she said, "No matter where I travel, I take my pepper mill and my pressure cooker with me. They are indispensable for my kind of cooking."

"I was married about 25 years ago in London," Mrs. Bayrock said. "We were going through a terrible time with food then. Our cuts of meat were poor, and everything was so tasteless and tough. Once a week we would spend all morning queued up for a miserable piece of meat.

"One day I went with my mother to a demonstration of the new pressure cookers. I marched right up on the stage when they offered to let us sample the pot roast.

"It was so marvellous I couldn't believe it. I bought one for myself and another for my mother. I haven't been without them since.

"My husband had spent six long years in the army and he just had to be 'fed up' on return — which I did in short order," she said.

Leaving London, Jean and her husband, Henry Bayrock (a designer and patternmaker for women's fashions, travelled extensively and lived in the Middle East, southern France and Dublin. She was constantly making notes of local foods and recipes.

Besides taking courses in advanced continental cuisine conducted by the chef of the famed Savoy Hotel in London, Jean attended classes at the Cordon Bleu, and the Viennese School of Baking.

Now as a resident of Elizabeth, N.J., she finds time to be involved in a number of community projects, all of which, of course, involve her love of food and cooking. The Bayrocks have two children — a married daughter, Susan, 22, and David, 18, a student. To help her daughter over the rough spots of a neophyte homemaker, Jean kept a "how to" diary, with hundreds of suggestions and ideas to make her lot a happy one. This she hopes to make into a book soon to help other young newlyweds.

Jean Bayrock in kitchen

Jean's observations about children and food run counter to the popular notion that all kids want to do is eat and run. In teaching boys and girls to cook, she notes that "they don't seem to have any hang-ups when it comes to spending time learning to cook, or washing up." She also thinks that young boys have a greater "sense of palate" than girls; she once held a spice recognition contest, and the boys won!

Jean brought her two vintage pressure cookers with her when the family moved to the United States several years ago.

"I use both every day, not only for current meals, but to cook ahead for entertaining," she said. "And of course I keep all the wonderful liquids from pressure-cooking vegetables to add to my homemade soup base."

Though she doesn't have to watch the budget that closely, she still practices thrift in the kitchen. One penny-saver Jean espouses is storing "butter papers" in the refrigerator. "Marvellous for greasing pans, and every last bit of that lovely butter gets used," she declares.

A newish and most exciting addition to her seemingly already-full life is her daily 10-minute local radio program, The English Epicure. Jean covers not only food and cookery, but community public service as well. And she's literally got the station staff eating out of her hand, as she brings in "a little something" for them to sample from time to time.

Here is one of Jean's favorite recipes, which she calls The Best Corned Beef In The World. "This is delicious served hot," she said. "Of course, with fresh cabbage, and lots of mashed potatoes — or cold with pickles, in sandwiches, and the last pieces left over will make a smashing dish of corned-beef hash."

BEST CORNED BEEF

4 pounds corned beef (brisket if possible)
2 cups cold water
1 onion
2-3 whole clover
1 bay leaf
Few peppercorns — black and white
1 clove garlic
Prepared mustard
Cloves

Cover meat with cold water and let soak for 1 hour. Place 2 cups water in pressure cooker with rack. Add onion with cloves stuck into it, bay leaf, peppercorns and garlic. Close cover securely, place pressue regulator on vent pipe; cook 60 minutes. Let pressure drop of its own accord.

Remove the meat to a baking dish. Score the fat on top into a diamond-like pattern, spread a little mustard over the top of the meat, sprinkle a little brown sugar over-all, stick a clove into each diamond. Bake in a moderate oven until fat browns slightly and sugar forms a glace.

Elderly Woman Wins Battle of Parking Lot

WINDSOR, England (AP) — A retired former schoolmistress has won a 20-year-battle to get rid of a parking lot in the centre of Windsor.

In 1952, when the town paved over the two-acre tract known as Bachelor's Acre, Doris Mellor objected. She claimed the site was common land, the property of the people, and had been for 800 years.

The Windsor borough council brushed her off, but Miss Mellor wouldn't give up. Now the common land commission has upheld her contention and ordered the paving removed and the grass put back. It will cost the council £30,000 (about $72,000) a year in parking tolls.

"There were a lot of Doubting Thomases who thought I would never succeed," said the 78-year-old woman, "but there was never any doubt in my mind."

Broader Legal Power Urged for Consumers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Consumer Council, in its annual report, urges provincial governments to adopt the "doctrine of lesion" giving courts the power to rewrite any "basically unfair consumer transaction."

The report also recommends tougher provincial laws to crack down on false advertising and deceptive sale practices.

Specifically, it suggests that all representations leading to a transaction, whether conducted verbally by a salesman or carried on through advertising, be made "a fundamental" term of the transaction.

A consumer could thus seek cancellation of unfair transactions or collect damages for non-performance.

The council also calls for legislation to guarantee speedy and inexpensive enforcement of consumer rights through binding court action "where procedures are both simple and accessible and lawyers are not required."

The report, covering 1971, says consumer affairs in Canada were characterized during the year by "confrontation" although some important advances, such as passage of the Consumer Protection Act in Quebec, were made.

But whatever progress was made during the first part of 1971 evaporated later during the emotional debate stirred by the federal government's proposed competition act, the report says.

The Canadian business community mounted a "massive and concerted attack" on the bill, it says.

"By year end, no less than 300 briefs and submissions had been forwarded to the minister of consumer and corporate affairs. Of these, perhaps two or three had come from consumer interest groups. The rest were from industry at all levels and in all sectors."

The council described the bill, which the government finally withdrew for revision and never brought back, as the second most important piece of consumer legislation to come before Parliament. The first was the bill that created the consumer corporate affairs department.

The debate over the bill illustrates the handicaps confronting those who would speak out for consumer protection, the council says.

The business community was able to marshal batteries of lawyers, accountants and economists to present its case while, at the same time, harnessing the media to "mount a substantial, often highly emotional, almost rabble-rousing attack."

"But who was there to speak for the consumer advancement aspects of the proposed legislation?"

This type of "inequality in the political marketplace" is just as intolerable as consumer inequity in the marketplace, it says.

"If it is allowed to continue . . . we will see repetitions of unbalanced presentation and inarticulated concerns at the expense of advancing consumer interest."

'Middle-Aged Sex-Obsessed'

LEICESTER, England (CP) — Despite all the talk about promiscuity among the younger generation, one scientist believes that "the middle-aged are the ones obsessed with immoral behavior." Speaking at a meeting of the British Science Association, Dr. Peter McPhail said that many parents "felt they had missed out on the fun," according to a survey he carried out.

'Kept Men Are All-Male'

HOLLYWOOD (Reuter) — These days gentlemen no longer prefer blondes. It's the blondes who "keep" the gentlemen.

That is the finding of author Anita Loos whose, classic tale of the flapper of the 1920s, Gentlemen Prefer Blondes has been made into a play and a film.

"These days it's women who are keeping men," says the tiny woman who looks like a miniature version of her heroine Lorelei Lee, as played by Carol Channing in the Broadway production.

"I know many more men who are kept by women these days than I did women who were kept by men in the 20s," she said in an interview.

Aged about 80, wearing a pony tail, fringed dress, and spectacles, she goes off into peals of laughter as she recalls the saga of women's liberation this century.

"I think men being kept is a rather satisfactory situation, provided the man is a real man and is not ashamed of his situation.

"You have to be a real 110-per-cent male to take money from a woman and make her like it.

"But the trouble is that American women are very bad keepers of men. They are stingy."

Miss Loos, who has just finished co-authoring a book about exploring New York called Twice Over Lightly with an old stage friend, Helen Hayes, says the turnabout began with the Depression.

"Brokers were jumping out of windows in droves. We were delighted. We didn't have to be kept any more. Women went out to work. And that was the end of the kept girl.

"What shows the true nobility of our sex is that although there were all those headlines about brokers jumping out of windows you never saw one headline which said 'Kept Girl Jumps From Love-nest.'"

A few years after the Depression, she says, American women got hold of the country's wealth.

"They did it by becoming widows. They killed off the men who had the money. They killed them off by aggravation."

Conserving Juice:

Oven Doubling Saves on Fuel

By JEANNE VOLTZ
Colonist-Los Angeles Times

Two generations ago, a homemaker with any enterprise took very seriously the leaflets which came in the power or gas company bill which told how to save "juice" or "gas."

A woman dedicated to being a good manager went to consumer service demonstrations conducted by her utility company, local newspaper, extension service or other educational agency. She sat in the front row, duly noted any fuel-saving hints and went home to apply her thrifty data.

Oven meals were a way of life, too. A smart housewife of the late 30s or 40s put a meat loaf in the oven with potatoes, maybe scalloped tomatoes and apples to bake. This was dinner.

Her mother before her had filled the oven of the formidable black iron stove with things to bake anytime it was fired up. The house simply reeked of such delicious smells as gingerbread, apple brown betty and molasses cookies.

Today, children, grandchildren and even great-grandchildren of the thirft generations are reverting to this waste-not, want-not philosophy. After considering the saving of a nickel's worth of electric or gas power as miserly, today's young are thinking in terms of conserving energy for all humanity.

The same 20-year-old who told her mother six years ago that only a stingy square would fret about a television set running all night because the teen-ager forgot to turn it off, is insisting her mother turn the thermostat a notch lower to conserve energy.

Certainly there are many areas where electric or gas power can be saved.

But we are concerned with ways cooking fuel can be saved. Grandmother or mother probably practised such economies constantly. We obtained these fresh ideas from various utility companies which service the Los Angeles area.

These are 10 routes to eating well with less fuel:

● Preheat the oven only if necessary. Cookies, cakes and some breads require a preheated oven, but many casseroles can start as the oven is beginning to heat contrary to common practice, the broiler does not need preheating.

● Cook food only until done. Gauge cooking time by good recipes and use a thermometer when possible (for meats, especially) to judge cooking time.

● Use stored heat for any job it will do. Plates of leftover foods can be warmed in an oven with heat turned off after the roast is cooked. Leftover rice, dry beans or vegetables can be spread in a shallow pan such as a pie plate to reheheat evenly and quickly.

● Aluminum foil acts as an insulator, thus demanding higher heat and longer cooking. Use foil only when necessary. Do not cover foods baked in the oven unless the recipe specifically calls for covering. A cover keeps out heat, thus prolonging cooking time.

● Surface units operate most efficiently with pans which have flat bottoms or bottoms which fit the unit snugly with little or no overlap.

● Match the size of the pan to the surface unit. The bottom of the pan should cover the unit, but extend no more than one inch beyond the outer edges. On a gas range, adjust the flame to heat the widest expanse possible of the bottom of the pan, but not to lap up around the pan.

● Cover a pan on the surface units when bringing liquids to a boil, simmering or cooking vegetables or rice. This holds in heat and conserves vegetable nutrients. However, pans must be uncovered for sauted foods to become crisp or when a sauce, jelly or syrup is being evaporated.

● Check recipes carefully and use correct oven or surface temperatures. Use high heat only to bring water to a boil, then turn heat low to maintain a boil.

● Double boliers are unnecessary if you keep a very low heat under a heavy pan. The water in a double boiler increases use of fuel.

● Use no more water or other liquid than is needed. Water makes heavy demands on fuel and excessive water also leaches out nutrients.

Possibly the primary rule of fuel economy is to cook double when possible. Oven meals are the primary double-cooking tactic — a meat dish, a vegetable and dessert; a meaty casserole and a dessert; a roast and vegetables.

The combinations are endless. To work our your own oven meals, start with a main dish. Study a good cookbook for other foods which bake at a similar temperature.

Carpet Tiles Take Care

Carpet tiles are really mini rugs and need the same care as larger rugs, according to the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Method of installation is different, and home cleaning materials should be used sparingly, the association says. "This is to prevent wetting of the backing of carpet tiles, particularly if they are made of jute. If the cleaning compounds wet the backing, the adhesive may be released and the tiles peel off."

On carpets generally, the association says the type of carpet pile affects cleaning and wear of rugs.

Cut pile has a tendency to mat down and lose its new appearance faster, developing traffic lanes and shading if vacuuming is not all done in the same direction.

For ease of cleaning, loop pile is better because footprints, vacuum cleaner marks and fuzzing do not occur as readily, the CAC says in its latest bulletin.

YATES STREET HILLSIDE

Author Blames Apathy

'Canadians Losing Tastebuds'

TORONTO (CP) — Dinner-table dullness has been epidemic in Canada for too long, says Sondra Gotlieb. She says Canadians really believe they should eat what's in front of them without comment or complaint.

"Canadians traditionally treat food like sex. They don't talk about it.

"There's no reason why we have to live off frozen fish fillets and California fruit.

"The great weakness of Canada is that we'll settle for mediocrity."

Mrs. Gotlieb is author of The Gourmet's Canada, a gastronomic tour of the country. In it she describes with enthusiasm the foods of every region and various backgrounds.

A native of Winnipeg, she lives in Ottawa. She said in an interview she and her husband both come from families of fussy eaters.

Canadians were in danger of losing their food heritage out of apathy and bad merchandising.

"We're losing our tastebuds in Canada, and we don't have to, we've got fantastic food resources. We have everything here from caviar on downwards.

"We have to push ourselves. We have to grow it and distribute it better. We depend too much on California.

"For instance, supermarkets have contracts with California distributors, and a farmer who lives right next door to a supermarket can't sell his stuff.

"The problem with berries, throughout Canada, is the picking. People don't want to pick them any more. People who own apple and berry farms aren't millionaires. They can't pay $2.50 an hour."

Because of these two factors, she said, Canadian blueberries and raspberries are rarely seen except in roadside stands and farmers' markets or on pick-your-own farms.

She maintained misread market demands cut down the variety and flavor or native apples in Canada.

"We grow apples for appearance and color, not taste.

"In Banff, people want to eat the wonderful local trout. They don't know it's frozen, from Japan, because of our game laws.

"We don't do enough restocking. If it's properly controlled, restaurants can serve game. There isn't going to be a mass demand."

She said most Winnipeg goldeye comes from Minnesota.

"But they don't restock fish.

"It's not too late. Look at the salmon on the West Coast. It had almost disappeared.

"That's what I mean. If you're totally uninterested in what you eat, you won't do anything. If you're interested in what you eat, you'll want to be able to eat it 20 years from now."

Mrs. Gotlieb said Canadians don't have to eat dreary food anywhere in the country.

"There's nowhere I've been in Canada where you can't get something good to eat if you look out for it. There may not be a good restaurant, but there'll be good shops.

"Anything is good as long as it's fresh and well cooked. It's the pre-cooked, predigested foods we have to avoid."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I think the Women's Libbers have bitten off more than they can chew. Their problems are just beginning. I heard today that several women walked off the job because three females were asked to grease machinery, which required them to work lying on their backs for several hours at a stretch. Another group of women balked at lifting 150-pound drums of coffee beans. They said it was a "dirty trick," and refused to follow orders.

It seems to me that if women want equal pay and the same privileges that men get they should be willing to do a man's work — either that or admit they are inferior and keep their traps shut. What do you think, Ann?—M.C. Pig.

Dear Pig: I think I'll keep my trap shut until I find out what really happened. There have already been some conflicting reports.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a physician. Dedicated and conscientious. He came home tonight exhausted. It was an especially trying day.

No sooner had we seated ourselves at the dinner table when he received a telephone call from a woman who lives in our neighborhood. She's had this "funny" pain for about three months. She decided it would be better to call him after office hours so he could run over. She didn't want to "interfere with his day."

I was so mad I could have chewed nails. So was he, but he went anyway. Can you make some comment?—M.D.'s Wife

Dear Wife: No: I'm also chewing nails.

Dear Ann Landers: Today when I returned from school I asked my mother if I had any mail. She replied, "Yes, there was a letter. Here it is." Then she handed me an envelope which had been opened. I said, "It looks as if you've read it." Her answer was, "I didn't think you'd mind. I couldn't imagine anything in it that you wouldn't want me to know about."

I got ticked off and told her she had no business reading my correspondence and if I had to receive my mail at a friend's house to get privacy I'd do it. She yelled for half an hour, said it would be an insult to her, and grounded me for three days.

I've learned a lot from your column and I know adults pay attention to what you say, too. Is Mom right, or am I?—Monitored

Dear Mon: Any person who is old enough to read doesn't need Momma to open her mail. You have every right to ask your mother to keep her pea-pickin' hands off your letters. If you wish to share a sentence or two, or the entire letter, or none of it, it's up to you. But you are under no obligation to do so.

Dear Ann Landers: I had to say something about the letter signed Her Husband. His wife was a nymphomaniac, but very sweet and generous and everyone loved her.

Well, I'm no nymphomaniac but after 15 years of marriage to Mr. Wrong, I met Mr. Right. Our affair lasted two years and then my husband found out. My lover and I were in no position to get married so we stopped seeing each other.

The whole time our affair was going on I was sweet and generous — and everybody loved me. I was even able to be nice to my mother-in-law. I had a tremendous amount of energy, could clean up the house in two hours, cook, bake and sing all the while.

When I was deprived of my love I became mean and bitter. Now my housework never gets done and I hate cooking. I'm living for the day when we get back together for good. There's no substitute for a satisfying sex life.—Mean Myrtle

Dear Myrtle: I agree. How about trying to work it out with your husband? It must have been good early in your marriage. At what point did things turn sour? Your solution might be closer than you think.

Tardy Brides Ticked Off

TREVETHIN, Wales (UPI) — Rev. Ralph Bowden says the next time a bride keeps her groom waiting at the altar at his church he will not marry the couple.

"There is seldom any good reason for a bride to be late," said Bowden, 40, the town's Anglican vicar. "It is simply discourteous to keep what amounts sometimes to hundreds of people waiting quite deliberately."

Church on Wednesday?

Yes. Every Wednesday in our church.

Here people gather to tell how a knowledge of God, gained through the study of the Bible and the writings of Mary Baker Eddy, has helped them to overcome physical problems and mental hangups.

Whether or not they speak, people come to get fresh ideas about God from others' healings. We'd love to share ideas with you. You don't have to be a Christian Scientist to come.

PROVINCIAL COURT

"I got out of jail and my wife was in jail. I was lonely. I had no friends except those that I had before and the inevitable happened."

That was the reason given Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court by Wayne Douglas Shepherd, 22, no fixed address who pleaded guilty Monday to a Victoria charge of break-in and theft.

The charge concerned a $175 portable television set and a $60 clock radio which were taken last Thursday from the home of friends of Shepherd's at 2412 Wark. The two items were sold soon after at a Victoria secondhand store for a total of $45.

Judge William Ostler asked if the phrase "the inevitable" meant Shepherd had used heroin and the young man replied: "I did it a few times."

He was sentenced to six months in jail.

□

A security officer for The Bay testified John Auxi, 1163 Johnson, had $85 cash plus a bank passbook showing deposits of $38,478 when he was stopped Friday afternoon for shoplifting.

Auxi pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200 and the security officer said the stolen items were a coat, a china horse and four butcher knives worth a total of $170.78.

Ostler said many people who shoplift "are actually in need and steal small things" but there was a difference in this case. He fined Auxi $500, twice the normal amount for a first shoplifting offence.

□

Three other persons who pleaded guilty to separate Victoria shoplifting charges of theft involving less than $200 were fined $250 each.

They were Harold Hetherington, 61, of 188 Maddock, who took two items worth a total of $2.98 Monday from Simpsons-Sears; Mrs. Elsie Lillian Sherman, 72, of Duncan, who took several items wort a total of $11.64 Monday from Simpsons-Sears, and Alan Vernon Griffin, 59, of 3711 Palo Alto, who took several items worth a total of $52.28 Monday from Woodward's.

Donald John Campbell, 17, of 1190 Bewdley, was fined $250 by Ostler and put on probation for one year after he was found guilty of common assault following a trial.

Campbell had originally been charged with assault causing bodily harm following an incident Oct. 13 in the 900-block Esquimalt Road when a 16-year-old boy was hit on the right hip by a shot from a pellet gun. Ostler, reducing the charge, noted Campbell had been shooting in the area and indicated carelessness might be involved.

□

David John Petrie, 24, address not known, was sentenced by Ostler to 45 days in jail following his plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of breach of probation. Petrie was put on probation for one year last Aug. 7 in Sidney for possession of stolen property but pleaded guilty Nov. 3 in Victoria to possession of hashish and was jailed 21 days.

□

A suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term were set by Ostler for Abraham Wise, 58, of 971 Dingley Dell, who pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a narcotic — 10 marijuana cigarettes, found Oct. 28 when Wise was checked by police in the 600-Block Johnson.

□

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder set fines of $350 each for four persons who pleaded guilty to separate charges of impaired driving in Victoria. They were Robert Lloyd McGill, 54, of 352 Gorge East, stopped Saturday; Freda Ball, 53, of 896 Falaise, stopped Oct. 24; Margaret Mary Johnson, 28, of 1162 Kings, stopped Oct. 5, and Peter Mathew Mazur, 43, of 912 Market, stopped Oct. 20.

□

In similar cases, Frank Wight, 57, of 220 St. Andrew, was fined $350 after pleading guilty to a charge of being impaired Oct. 23 in Victoria while in care or control of a vehicle and Cecil Gavin Carder, 26, of 3336 Acemink, was fined $350 after pleading guilty to a charge of impaired driving Sept. 3 in the Colwood area.

'Oldest' Fossils Analysed Soon

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Rocks bearing what scientists say could be the oldest fossils ever discovered will be under analysis soon at the University of Arizona. The rocks, found in August in the Sierra Ancha region of the Tonto National Forest in northern Arizona, could contain fossils from 1.2 billion years ago, geochemist Donald Livingston said Tuesday.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Otis Elevator Co. Ltd. says it will no longer provide emergency repair services during the current nationwide strike by the International Union of Elevator Constructors.

Judge Shunts Death Trial To New Date

Two trials already set for Dec. 28 and 29 in Victoria Provincial Court were delayed Tuesday to a later date so a 28-year-old Victoria man charged with the non-capital murder of his wife won't have to spend several months in jail before his judge-and-jury trial.

Instead, those two days will be filled by the preliminary hearing of Ernest Hotvedt, who was charged Nov. 6 in connection with the stabbing death of his estranged wife Linda the day before in her residence at 1255 Balmoral.

The court calendar is filled into early February and defence lawyer Harold Turnham asked that something be done about an earlier hearing so his client could go before judge and jury in a B.C. Supreme Court session expected to start in early January.

Consultation with Judge William Ostler and prosecutor John Macintyre showed two income tax trials, where none of the accused is in custody, had been set some time ago for Dec. 28 and 29.

Turnham will act as prosecutor in both cases and promised to notify defence lawyers of the double pre-emption.

He indicated no attempt would be made to seek bail for Hotvedt and said Hotvedt would not go before judge and jury until late spring if the hearing wasn't held before the January higher-court session.

Ostler also set Feb. 12 as the date for a preliminary hearing of a two-count charge of theft of the mails and theft of mailbags against postman David Russel Swanbeck, 42, of 2630 Roseberry.

Swanbeck had been charged Nov. 7 and then released on his undertaking to return for further court appearances.

Man Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — William Salisbury, 25, of Vancouver, has been charged with two counts of criminal negligence and one count of driving while impaired in connection with an accident that killed two men. Anthony John Fleig, 22, of Pointe Claire, Que., and Kim Wagner, 18, of Sarnia, Ont., died in the accident Monday night.

GANGES — Three stone fireplaces, some metal grille from a bar and a pile of ashes were all that remained Tuesday of the historic Harbour House Hotel on Salt Spring Island.

The 70-year-old hotel was levelled by an early-morning fire which had firemen still mopping up more than 12 hours after it broke out.

No one was injured in the blaze which totally destroyed the old wing of the hotel.

The fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m. in the hotel which was the old family home of the Crofton family, well-known in Vancouver Island history.

"When we got there the hotel was completely engulfed in a cloud of smoke," said Cpl. D. B. Burke of the Ganges RCMP. "The flames hadn't broken out yet."

"However, within a short time the flames did break out and spread through the building. The structure was entirely wooden, "and the whole thing caved right in."

NANAIMO — Trial of William George McFadden, 56, of Ladysmith on a non-capital murder charge, opened in supreme court Tuesday morning, with evidence from a Nanaimo pathologist.

Dr. R. S. Clarke, who performed an autopsy on the body of Charles Herbert Lumley, said the cause of death was a bullet through the brain.

Lumley was shot June 6 in a beer parlor at Ladysmith.

Ivan Dergousoff, a resident of the hotel at the time of the shooting, told the court he saw McFadden get out of a taxi in front of the hotel June 6 and that the accused was carrying a rifle.

Harbour House Blaze Cause Unknown

Fire Demolishes Salt Spring Hotel

GANGES — Three stone fireplaces, some metal grille from a bar and a pile of ashes were all that remained Tuesday of the historic Harbour House Hotel on Salt Spring Island.

The 70-year-old hotel was levelled by an early-morning fire which had firemen still mopping up more than 12 hours after it broke out.

No one was injured in the blaze which totally destroyed the old wing of the hotel.

The fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m. in the hotel which was the old family home of the Crofton family, well-known in Vancouver Island history.

"When we got there the hotel was completely engulfed in a cloud of smoke," said Cpl. D. B. Burke of the Ganges RCMP. "The flames hadn't broken out yet."

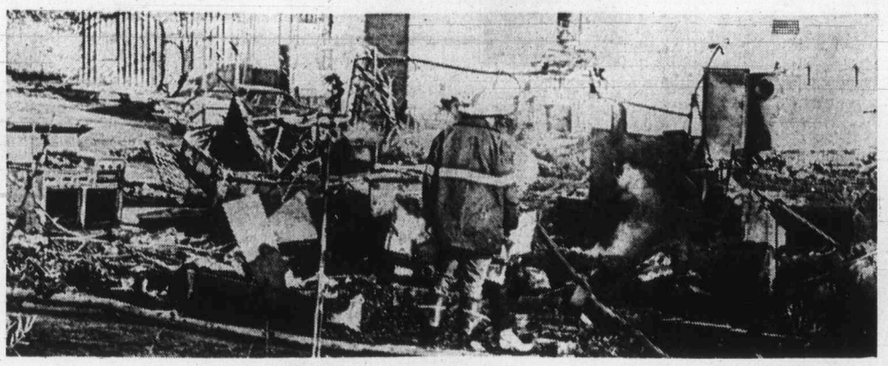

"However, within a short time the flames did break out and spread through the building. The structure was entirely wooden, "and the whole thing caved right in."

Burke said there had been four or five people in the building when the fire began, and all had been evacuated without any difficulty. Some had not yet gone to bed when the fire started, he said.

The three storey building had contained a lobby, meeting hall, dining room and kitchen on the main floor and guest rooms on the top two floors.

All members of the Ganges and Fulford Harbor volunteer fire department turned out to battle the blaze, a fire department spokesman said, with a total of about 24 men involved in the fight.

The fire was brought under control quite quickly, the spokesman said, but firemen were still on the scene after 3 p.m. Tuesday, overturning the rubble and putting out small pockets of fire which remained.

Fireman pokes through smouldering ruins

A new wing of the hotel, known as the Condor Inn and containing a pub and cocktail lounge, was not seriously damaged in the fire, Burke said. It sustained some smoke damage and heat blew out some windows but the fire itself did not damage that wing.

Cause of the fire has still not been determined and RCMP and fire officials are continuing an investigation.

Trial Starts

NANAIMO — Trial of William George McFadden, 56, of Ladysmith on a non-capital murder charge, opened in supreme court Tuesday morning, with evidence from a Nanaimo pathologist.

Dr. R. S. Clarke, who performed an autopsy on the body of Charles Herbert Lumley, said the cause of death was a bullet through the brain.

Lumley was shot June 6 in a beer parlor at Ladysmith.

Ivan Dergousoff, a resident of the hotel at the time of the shooting, told the court he saw McFadden get out of a taxi in front of the hotel June 6 and that the accused was carrying a rifle.

The witness aid he was on his way downstairs when someone handed him a rifle, which he kept in his room until the police came for it. Dergousoff identified a .22-calibre rifle as the one handed to him on the evening of June 6.

The trial continues.

English Ivy

One question I am asked fairly often is what kind of a vine can be planted to clothe a north-facing house wall where very little sunshine ever penetrates. For this purpose, I can't think of any subject more likely to thrive than our common English ivy, yet so many folks seem to have a prejudice against this vine.

This is a case of "give a dog a bad name, then hang him," for the prejudice against ivy exists without very much in the way of justification.

The charges against ivy are twofold. It is said to kill trees and to damage buildings, and as proof, the ivy-haters point to decrepit or dying trees and to ancient ruined castles and abbeys in Britain, both alike loaded with ivy. One might as well observe a corpse in a coffin and deduce that the coffin was the cause of death!

Ivy is said to be a parasite and a strangler. We are told that the aerial roots by which it climbs removes the mortar from the walls of buildings and rob trees of their nourishment. It is claimed, too, that the vine entwines tree trunks and branches so closely that the flow of sap is checked.

It seems to me that even casual observation will show that the first of these accusations is false and the second greatly exaggerated. Ivy is NOT a parasite, and its aerial roots are quite incapable of penetrating the bark of a tree to reach the living tissues beneath.

The function of these aerial roots is to cling and support the vine, not to feed it, and the ivy obtains its nourishment from the soil and the air like any other green-leafed plant. True parasites are seldom green, so they don't need any chlorophyl to manufacture food; they feed by sucking the lifeblood from the host plant.

It is possible that on very old masonry walls the aerial roots DO extract a little calcium from the crumbling mortar, but modern buildings are bonded with cement, a material much less congenial to plants than the old-fashioned lime mortar.

Nor is ivy capable of strangling trees. The natural tendency of the vine is to grow or creep in a straight line, and only once in a hundred cases will it go out of its way to encircle a limb. Even then, it exerts no real pressure to limit sap flow.

Another charge against ivy is that it makes the walls damp by preventing the drying winds and sunshine from reaching the stucco or masonry. Yet anyone who has ever "brushed" or cleaned out ivy growing on a wall will know what a dreadfully dusty job this is. Actually, the overlapping leaves of the vine keep a wall dry by shedding the rain. The only case of a wet wall under ivy I have ever seen was caused by a blocked downspout, causing the eavestroughs to overflow and spill down the wall.

Ivy is a highly decorative plant of the easiest possible culture, useful not only for clothing walls but also as a hardy and trouble-free ground cover. And if the ordinary plain green-leafed kind is too "common" for you, there are dozens of varieties available in which the leaves are variegated or edged in gold, silver, white or bronze, none of them overly expensive.

Coattails Missing

WASHINGTON — Everyone is asking why President Nixon, with his tremendous victory, was unable to bring in any of the other Republican cadidates on his coattails.

I can now clear up the mystery: the president did not have any coattails for anyone to hitch on to.

What happened was that a few months before the election Pat Nixon decided the president needed a new suit for election night. She called his tailor and made an appointment. The tailor came to the White House and measured Nixon for his suit.

★ ★ ★

Two weeks later the tailor came back to give Nixon his first fitting. The president, aware that candidates all over the country were depending on him, asked the tailor, "What about the coattails?"

"The coattails come last," the tailor replied. "First I have to get the collar and the lapels right."

"Wouldn't a double vent give me a longer coattail for the other candidates to hitch on to?"

"You want a double vent in the jacket," the tailor said, "I'll give you a double vent."

★ ★ ★

"I guess the politically popular thing would be for me to have a single vent. But sometimes a president must do the unpopular thing even if he loses votes."

"A double event is just as good as a single vent," the tailor said.

"I have to think not only of my party, but of all America. My choice of a vent should not be decided because of one special interest group or another.

"It's true some people in this country, honest people with the best of intentions, believe in the single vent jacket. They have a right to their opinion and I respect them for it.

"But I hope they also respect my right to have a double vent in my jacket if I believe it's best for the country."

"Will you stop moving your hands, Mr. President, or I'll never get the shoulders straight."

"I believe the great thing about this country is that we can honestly disagree about vents in our jackets and, after election day, get behind the president whether he has one or two vents in his suit.

"You make me proud to be an American tailor," the suitmaker said.

The tailor went away and worked on the suit. He tried to get an appointment for another fitting, but every time he got someone on the White House phone they told him the president was too busy to see him.

The tailor was desperate and said he had to give the president another fitting as he hadn't measured Nixon for his coattails.

★ ★ ★

Apparently the person he talked to didn't realize the significance of the fitting and gave the tailor the brushoff.

On election morning at San Clemente, the presidetnt asked where his new suit was. The White House staff panicked and an aide called the tailor in Washington, "Bring the president's suit right away."

"But," protested the tailor, "the coat has no back to it."

"Never mind the baek," Bob Haldeman said. "We're sending the president's plane for it and you'd better have it ready when we get there."

★ ★ ★

The tailor met the president's plane with the unfinished suit and it was delivered just before Nixon was scheduled to vote. He put the suit on and asked his friends, secret servicemen and family, "How do you like it?"

As in the case of the emperor who had no clothes on, no one dared tell the president his suit had no back.

And that is why every Republican candidate who tried to grab the president's coattails on election day found himself with a handful of muslin instead.

Sonny Alone Nothing

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — It's all consternation over at CBS-TV because they've got Sonny but no Cher. The statuesque beauty took off for San Francisco after some fisticuffs up in Las Vegas the other night, duly reported here. Hard to say who came out better in the fight because Cher is bigger than her husband, but the argument was over an amorous trombone player. The two were due for rehearsals for their television show but only Sonny made it. Sonny without Cher is like Flip Wilson without Geraldine or Rowan without Martin.

★ ★ ★

The ex-boyfriend of Denise Nicholas who cuffed her around down in Tucson was singer Bill Withers who left town in a hurry. Denise, the beauteous black star of Room 222, wound up in the hospital, but that is not why Withers ledt town so fast. Denise is making The Soul of Nigger Charley in Tucson and she is very friendly with a 280-pound giant in the movie by name of George Allen. For one scene in the movie Allen is lassoed by a cowboy who plans to have a little fun dragging Allen behind the horse. With no help from special effects, Allen grabbed the rope and pulled down the horse. No wonder. Withers left town in a hurry. The word was out that Allen was looking for him.

★ ★ ★

Will they or won't they? When David Janssen left for Israel this week to begin a new movie, Sabra, his good friend, as they say in the trade, wasn't there to see him off. Dani Greco left on the same plane. Friends feel that the two may wed in the Middle East when the upcoming divorce from singer Buddy Greco is final.

★ ★ ★

No doubt about it, Burt Reynolds has emerged as the sex symbol of the '70s. Maybe the key is in this bit of philosophy as expressed by Burt. "I love women but I really don't think a lot of men do."

★ ★ ★

What's with all the show business accidents? Jim Nabors is working on crutches severely injuring his ankle the other night during a frenetic jitterbug number at Harrah's Tahoe. And Jim Brolin of Marcus Welby is home for six weeks after breaking his ankle in several places while riding a motorcycle during a scene for the show. Talked with Jim in the hospital and he said that the motorcycle was a street job, not suited for the fast dirt run he had to make for the scene. And Bobbie Gentry broke her nose on the microphone at the Desert Inn. And, of course, the two worst are recuperating — Ann Miller and Anne-Margret.

★ ★ ★

The Beverly Hills home of Harry Karl and Debbie Reynolds is on the market for $695,000, reviving divorce rumors. Harry denies it. He says that Debbie will live in New York while she does Irene and he will take an apartment in Century City. Meanwhile, one of Karl's relatives says there will be a divorce. Who knows in this town?

Sydney Harris

Greed Sinking Venice

The last time I saw Venice it was sinking, but no longer stinking. This was in 1951, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers had come in just after the war and removed the noxious odor from the canals.

But this lovely city, though no longer malodorous, is still sinking. In the last 15 years alone, it has sunk two more inches into its lagoon. At the present rate of settling, our grandchildren would have to visit Venice in a submarine.

The irony in this slow disaster is that $400 million was allocated to save the city almost two years ago, by providing a flood control project to be built at the three entrances to the lagoon from the Adriatic. The amount was raised by an international consortium as a loan to Italy.

This "Save Venice" drive, however — sponsored by UNESCO after a frightful flood in 1966 — has ground to a halt, because the commercial interests around the city insist on more industrial growth, while the conservationists protest that the industrial growth has been the prime cause of the environmental degradation of Venice.

According to a dispatch in the New York Times, "The oil refineries, petrochemical complexes and other plants in the Venice areas are being denounced for polluting the air and the lagoon and for pumping huge quantities of fresh water out of the subsoil."

At the same time, the business elements are clamoring for expanding the industrial parks on the borders of the lagoon, on the theory that Venice must "grow" and not turn into a mere "museum city."

This same conflict is going to be repeated in large cities everywhere, though not in so dramatic a setting as Venice.

This is the bind that industrial civilization finds itself in: growth brings prosperity, but it also brings deterioration. What may be profitable in the short run may turn out to have long-run disastrous consequences.

★ ★ ★

We have scarcely begun to face up to this modern dilemma. In his new book, The Mature Society, Denis Gabor, the inventor of the holograph and winner of a Nobel Prize in physics, comes out flatly on the side of limiting growth severely.

Although himself a technologist, he warns that expanding technology poses one of the greatest threats to modern society — not merely to the unique beauty of a city like Venice, but to the very survivability of every urban area in the world.

In his educated opinion, what we need is an "orderly retreat" — which is the hardest manoeuvre to execute — in population, in production and in consumption.

Our standard of living must decrease, he asserts, in order for our quality of living to increase.

But, as in Venice, we are going to find it much easier to take the smell of garbage out of the canal than the smell of money out of the land.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

The Celanese Fibers Marketing Co. of the U.S. may be the find of the year on TV in 1973.

Celanese recently decided to spend about $3 million for about 200 one-minute commercials on the Johnny Carson show from Jan. 2 through Dec. 31 next year. The company's advertising director, Warren Stewart, then got an idea that might make a buck while improving viewing.

He sold Celanese on the idea of forming a Celanese Players repertory group, mostly from the improvisational comedy company The Committee, and hiring Smothers Brothers writer Carl Gottlieb.

There will be 150 different commercials to show the versatility of Celanese products. That means only 50 reruns at most or, to put it another way, 100 of the commercials will be seen only once. Hope it catches on.

ABC is the latest to buy one of those fine short series from England and this one is a dandy. The network says it will show the seven-episode story of The Strauss Family next year with Eric Woofe as the elder Johann, Anne Stallybrass as his wife and Stuart Wilson as their famous son. The London Symphony Orchestra plays the music.

□

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's answer — Second bananas abound in every type of TV series, even fantasies and war action. Richard Basehart had David (Al) Hedison as his aide on Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea while aide Vic Morrow was better known than boss Rick Jason on Combat. Basehart and Morrow are actors, Jason and Hedison personalities.

Today's question — Name the fine actor who went from comic schoolboy on Our Miss Brooks to comic son on Real McCoys to public figure on Slattery's People. And name his Miss Brooks character. Answers Thursday.

● 11:30 — Left-Handed Gun (1958 Billy the Kid, offbeat but most interesting), Paul Newman, John Dehner, Hurd Hatfield. New-wave moviemakers consider this a classic — 7, 12.

11:50 — Union Pacific (1939 DeMille western dandy), Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, Zillions more. Pure ham but good fun — 2.

12:00 — Tattered Web (1971 police drama, just routine ma'm), Lloyd Bridges, Broderick Crawford, Frank Converse. A made-for-TV yawn — 6, 8.

C-12:30 a.m. — Reprisal (1956 western bore), Guy Madison. Speaking of Diana Dors, did you know Sandra Dee was born Sandra Zuck? — 13.

1:35 — Call Northside 777 (well acted 1948 documentary-drama), James Stewart, Richard Conte. Documentary filmmakers consider this a classic and rightly so — 12.

THE ACES

World Champions

ON BRIDGE
IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

In the 1972 World Bridge Olympics Great Britain's first three opponents were former colonies—New Zealand, Australia and South Africa. Ron Klinger of Australia was quoted, "Once upon a time the sun never set on the British Empire; here, it was not until the final match that the mother country saw a bit of daylight." New Zealand and Australia both scored wins of 14-6 and, finally, Britain defeated South Africa by a score of 13-7.

Today's hand helped Australia to their victory. Tim Seres, Australian bridge star, once again showed his abilities in unerring declarer play.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of diamonds.

West's double of the final contract is difficult to criticize. However, sometimes it is doubles such as this that lead declarer to the right line of play. Note that North had much respect for Seres' play—otherwise, why would he dream up a raise on that collection of jacks?

West decided to lead from his worthless suit and when he chose his middle card, East had some difficulty in recognizing the position. After dummy played low, East rose with the queen which did nothing to make Seres' life more difficult.

Declarer won the diamond and immediately played the spade king. West won and could do no better than return the spade jack. Declarer won the queen and led his singleton club. West won the club queen, cashed the spade ten and then tried to cash the club ace. However, declarer ruffed and he now had a good picture of the location of the outstanding high cards.

Seres was sure that West had not started with all three club honors, since he did not lead clubs. East was, therefore, marked with the diamond queen and the club king and, more important, West had to have the heart king for his double.

Having placed the high cards, the rest was easy. A low diamond was led to dummy's jack and a heart returned to declarer's ace. Two high diamonds followed and two hearts were discarded from dummy. Next came the heart queen and when West did not cover, it was allowed to ride for a ruffing finesse.

Seres lost two spades and a club and made his doubled contract. And as Klinger quipped, "Seres would never have jumped to four spades without that nine of hearts!"

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Victoria Cuts Flyer String At 10 Games

Victoria Nixons snapped Fuller Lake Flyers' unbeaten streak at 10 games and moved out in front of the Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Garth Cunningham and Larry Hansen scored two goals each for Nixons. Lorry Gloeckner, Jamie Robertson, Norm Allen and Larry Donaldson, who also picked up three assists, completed the Victoria scoring. Brian Smith, Paul Livingstone and Peter Rogerson scored for Fuller Lake.

Suspect Arrested In Bridge Blast

LAKE COWICHAN — The CNR section man was carrying out o routine inspection of the rail line from Youbou to Lake Cowichan last week when he discovered one of the trestles had been damaged by an explosion.

The ties had been splintered and the structure weakened by the blast, and could have collapsed had a train passed before the damage was discovered.

Investigation by the Lake Cowichan RCMP of the trestle, which had been dynamited, led to the arrest of Clifford Lundgren, 21, of Duncan. Lundgren appeared in Duncan Provincial court Tuesday charged with setting off an explosion.

The dynamite was set off Halloween night but because the railway is only used once in a while by logging trains, the damaged trestle was not discovered until several days later.

The explosion was the third incident involving dynamite within a month in the Lake Cowichan area, but marked the first time any damage resulted.

Lundgren was remanded 30 days pending a psychiatric examination and report.

Sparks Fly On Hiring Architects

Victoria Ald. Mike Young and Mayor Peter Pollen had a heated exchange Tuesday over whether all plans for substantial development projects should be prepared by qualified architects.

Young said they should ensure higher standards, but Pollen said it would be a mistake to favor "an august group of professionals" by making their stamp of approval mandatory.

In the heat of the argument that ensued, Pollen told Young he was "overly defensive and emotional." Young, in turn, accused the mayor of "petty shopkeeperism."

The entire verbal battle arose from a proposal by Young that the city establish an architectural design control panel which would oversee development plans before they are approved by city council.

Members of the city's planning committee, including Pollen, agreed that such a panel would serve a good purpose.

It was Young's second proposal, according to which plans for all major developments should be prepared by architects, that sparked the exchange with the mayor.

Pollen said there was no reason to advocate a "closed-shop" system. The city's "monstrosities," he said, hadn't necessarily been perpetrated on the community by non-architects.

Young's proposal, Pollen said, would impose a penalty on developers who had shown they could build good developments.

"That's the most horrible statement of poujadism I have every heard," snapped Young.

When the mayor enquired what poujadism meant, Young said: "petty shopkeeperism."

The committee decided to table the matter until the next meeting. Meanwhile, Young will prepare a detailed report on the subject.

Pollen To Use Ad in Paper Feud

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen's feud with the press in general and Stuart Underhill, vice-president of Victoria Press, in particular is about to enter a new phase.

This time, Pollen will use advertising space in both daily newspapers to fire another broadside at Underhill, who is also publisher of the afternoon Times.

In a quarter-page ad, Pollen will ask Underhill to reply to a letter he sent him about two months ago. The advertisement which is to appear sometime next week, probably Thursday, will also feature the mayor's letter.

But there will be more in the ad, Pollen said in an interview Monday.

"The ad will state that it's vital for the survival of our social and economic system that men in power are accountable for what they do," Pollen said.

"Mr. Underhill's . . . consistent refusal to answer my letter doesn't say much for his accountability," the mayor added.

The feud began some time ago when Pollen asked Underhill in a letter to explain why Victoria Press has a financial interest in Premier Cablevision, parent company of Victoria Cablevision which recently attempted unsuccessfully to raise its monthly subscriber rates from $4.50 to $5.

The letter also made reference to Underhill's position as director on Premier Cablevision's board of directors. Pollen charged that there was a conflict of interest involved. A publisher, he said, shouldn't serve in such a position.

The letter further asked why neither the Colonist nor the Times had opposed the cablevision rate increase in their editorials. It suggests that part of the reason was Victoria Press' involvement in Premier.

Pollen said he was paying for the ad himself.

Patient Care Queried

There are "quite a number" of private hospitals in B.C. that must improve their standards if they don't want to be shut down, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Tuesday.

Cocke answered questions about the state of the private hospitals after announcing that the provincial government had approved plans for financing an open heart surgery unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital. This means the hospital can borrow an additional $184,000.

"They can go ahead right now — the money's available," Cocke said.

Future Bright

Expansion of open heart units at two Vancouver hospitals is also planned. Cocke is pleased with the future outlook. He feels that by next spring or summer, B.C. will be able to handle 32 cases of open heart surgery a week as compared to the average of 13 now.

In the field of private hospitals, Cocke didn't want to be specific about numbers or to name names of those that might be considered sub-standard.

"If I went down the list there would be quite a number," he said. "They know already they have to keep their services up to snuff or else."

Permit Taken

Last month the operating permit of The Manor, a private hospital at 338 Foul Bay Road, was cancelled. A Greater Victoria health board report two years ago said there had been no attempt to improve the old hospital and that it appeared nothing would be done because of expected closure.

The NDP government of Premier Barrett has gone on record as being opposed to profit-making in the health field.

The government, according to an earlier statement by Barrett, is giving priority to a study of non-profit chronic care facilities in the province.

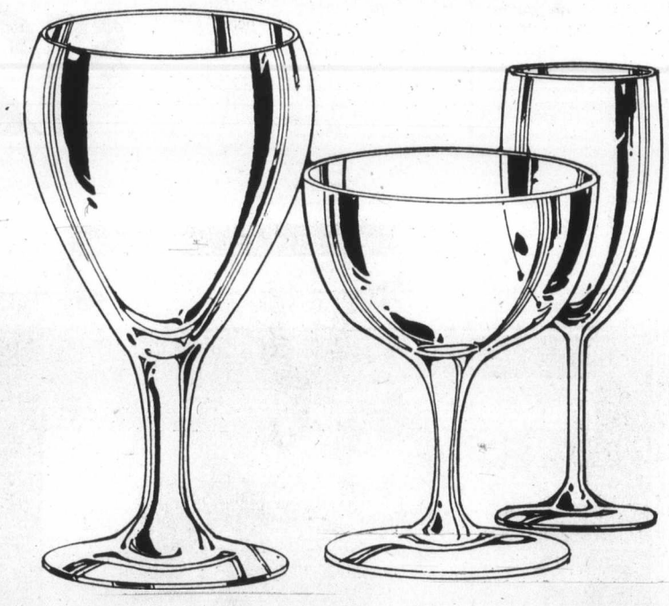

Priority Set

When the question of public facilities was put to Cocke Tuesday in connection with the private hospitals, he said: "Yes, we'd very much like to deal with public facilities — right now. But the problem is that our whole priority on financing has been set by Ottawa."

The money to be borrowed for the Royal Jubilee open heart surgery unit will pay for both renovations and equipment. According to the hospital, such surgery may be able to be performed at the unit before next summer — the earliest date that had been expected for the first open heart operations.

Court Says Ghana Plot Eight Die

ACCRA (UPI) — A military tribunal Tuesday convicted nine soldiers and civilians of trying to overthrow Ghana's government and sentenced eight of them to death by firing squad.

The nine were accused of conspiring with deposed former premier Kofi Busia and others to topple the military-controlled national redemption council which took power in Ghana 11 months ago.

All the defendants — three army sergeants, two privates and four civilians — had pleaded innocent to the charges of conspiracy to commit subversion and concealing subversion.

The only defendant to escape the death sentence was banker David Afful Bimpong, who was convicted only of concealing subversion. He drew a 25-year sentence.

Tug Inquiry Date Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — A formal inquiry into the sinking last February of the tug Haro Straits will open Dec. 18, a department of transport spokesman said Tuesday.

DOT investigators began examining the tug Tuesday and the spokesman said the technical investigation will probably be completed this week.

The tug sank with five crewmen in a gale off Point Roberts, Wash., about 30 miles south of here, and was raised to the surface Sunday.

Mrs. Gandhi Beats Oust Move

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi easily defeated an opposition move to bring down the Indian government Tuesday over high prices. Her ministers explained them away as the result of war and a late monsoon.

In doing so, however, Finance Minister Y. B. Chavan announced that India might have to import rice, edible seeds and wheat to bridge shortages, backtracking on Mrs. Gandhi's declaration of last January that "we need not import a single grain from any country."

Airport Police Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the United States Air Line Pilots Association ALPA called on President Nixon Tuesday to provide U.S. airports with federal police to supervise boarding and passenger screening in an effort to halt air hijackings.

ALPHA president John O'Donnell, in a letter to the president, said: "Due to the magnitude of the problem and the apparent inability of local, state and federal officials or the industry to achieve effective results, we must request that you immediately provide airports with federal officers."

Woman Twice Tarred

BELFAST (Reuter) — A Roman Catholic housewife was beaten and tarred Tuesday for the second time in four days by Irish Republican Army guerrilla sympathizers who accused her of giving information to the British army in Northern Ireland.

The woman was found by troops in Belfast's Ardoyne district and was taken to hospital. Her condition was serious, an army spokesman said.

She was still recovering when she was attacked again.

The British army said it believes the Provisional wing of the IRA, once strong in the Ardoyne area, has been hard hit by arrests of high-ranking officers following anonymous telephone tips.

Rats Losing Deadly War

DAVENPORT, Iowa (UPI) — City officials said Tuesday they have killed as many as 1,000 migrating rats forced out of an old city dump near a suburban Davenport area and another 1,000 were still at large.

The campaign seems to be working, public works director Rex Mathews said, "because we're now getting more calls to pick up dead rats than live ones."

So far, he said, the department has picked up 500 to 1,000 rats, most of them dead from poison planted at sewers, catch basins and a railroad yard.

The rats, some as large as squirrels, were forced out when the dump was closed. So far, Mathews said, the rodents have remained within half a mile of their old home on the bank of the Mississippi River and only one residential area has been threatened by the migration.

Mathews said the rats went on the move because the garbage was being shipped elsewhere and the Mississippi waters were rising slightly. Then public works employees began baiting the dump with highly toxic poison.

Shore Dwellers Complain

Lakes Probe Urged

A continued survey of 17 lakes in the Capital Region should be carried out to determine their degree of pollution, if any, senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said Tuesday.

On his recommendation, Greater Victoria health board decided to ask the provincial government for staff and equipment to conduct the survey.

The health board has requested two additional inspectors, one clerk, $500 a month for equipment rental and a percentage of the anticipated administration costs.

Whitbread told board members he has received many complaints from lake shore residents throughout the capital region about the lack of pollution assessment.

He said the health board should control the water quality of the lakes on a year-round basis, but didn't have the staff to do it. Occasional testing of the water, he said, wasn't enough.

Four lakes on the Gulf Islands are also to be included —St. Mary's Lake, Maxwell Lake, Cusheon Lake and Weston Lake.

Nine of the lakes are also used by residents as a source of drinking water.

The survey is to assess the impact of recreational activities, such as swimming and boating on the water quality. It will also assess effects of septic tank systems and shoreline dwellings.

Music from Spain

One of the world's foremost guitarists, Spain's Narcisco Yepes, will be guest artist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra Sunday and Monday at the Royal Theatre, and in recital Wednesday at McPherson Playhouse.

Yepes was born 45 years ago in Lorcas, Southern Spain, and began studying guitar at five. He came to the attention of Ataulfo Argenta, director of the Spanish National Orchestra, in 1946 and was urged to go to Madrid.

He made his concert debut there and subsequently toured with Argenta through Europe. Since then he has performed with leading orchestras and in recital in the near East, North and South Africa, North America and Japan.

Laborer Debut Painful

A 19-year-old Saanich resident survived a 40-foot fall Monday — his first day of work as a laborer on an apartment site at Burnside and Harriet.

Royal Jubilee Hospital officials said Keith Pearce, 4175 Douglas, was in fairly good condition with severe lacerations to his right leg. However, they added, he did not suffer any fractures in the fall.

Victoria police said Pearce was in his first day as a laborer for Rolston Construction and was laying shiplap on the fourth-floor ceiling of the building when he stepped backward and fell 40 feet to the ground, landing in dirt.

On the way, he struck a scaffold support about 30 feet above the ground, causing the lacerations to his upper and lower right leg.

Coach Makes Difference In West-United Victory

By MAX LOW

Wily Ron Thompson pushed the panic button Tuesday night.

Thompson's the playing-coach who doesn't want to play "unless there's an emergency."

He watched from the bench at Royal Athletic Park until things had reached the critical stage.

That was at half-time after the younger Victoria Gorge Molsons team had outhustled and outmuscled Thompson's Victoria West-United squad in their first Pacific Coast Soccer League meeting of the season.

At that stage, United had been lucky to manage a 1-1 draw.

Then Thompson stepped onto the field, and things began to happen as he stirred his club to a thrilling 3-2 victory.

The crowd was disappointingly small — only 341 — but those who came saw some great soccer.

Included was one of the prettiest goals seen at the park for many a season.

It came 17 minutes into the second half when Thompson sent over a lovely chip shot and goalkeeper Graham Lee jumped up to take the ball.

At the same time, George Pakos soared up gracefully and headed the ball past Lee's hands and through an incredibly small space between the goalkeeper and the post into the corner of the net.

That was the one that mattered. It was the 3-1 goal. The decider. It was also the sixth goal for Pakos in four matches, and it capped an exciting performance by a player who has recently moved up from the Victoria and District League.

Thompson's uplifting effect on United was instantaneous, and he gave the team the 2-1 goal only eight minutes into the second half when he hammered in a good pass from Pakos.

The young Gorge players were at their best in the first half, and yet it was their opponents who went ahead at the 32-minute mark when Stu Taylor slammed a shot past Lee.

But United held that lead for less than a minute when Howie Anderson's header failed to clear and George Hyne trickled the ball past goalkeeper Ash Douglas and into the net, via the goal post.

Boudrias Boosts Canucks With Two-Goal Performance

Vancouver Canucks may be in revolt, but it was the Detroit Red Wings they almost overthrew on Tuesday night.

Led by Andre Boudrias, reported to be one of the leaders of a dissident group unhappy with the coaching demands of Vic Stasiuk, Canucks scrapped back from a three-goal deficit to gain a 3-3 tie.

The 29-year-old Boudrias, who scored 52 goals in his first two season with the Canucks, had only one this season in his first 15 games, many of which saw him as a part-time player. But he came through with two scoring shots Tuesday, the last one bringing his team all the way back.

Boudrias got his team untracked late in the first period when he deflected the puck past Roy Edwards after a shot by Jocelyn Guevremont.

The goal came just in time to keep the sellout crowd, announced at the usual 15,570 but suspected of being considerably higher, from getting too restive. Wings had seemed to be in complete charge of disorganized opposition after Ron Stackhouse scored at 8:40 with a quick slap shot from just inside the blue line.

Guy Charron and Al Karlander followed with scoring shots and a rout appeared in the making until Boudrias scored.

Tonight's game between Atlanta and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8, starting at 5 o'clock.

Rookie Don Lever shoved the puck under Edwards late in the second period and Boudrias got the 3-3 goal on a power-play, beating Edwards early in the third period with a 25-foot blast.

Canucks made a big bid for the second point, but Edwards made brilliant stops on Richard Lemieux and Guevremont.

The result moved both clubs up a notch in the National Hockey League's East Division.

Lemaire Pads Lead In Scoring Parade

Jacques Lemaire, playing Tuesday night despite a painful wrist injury, scored once and assisted on another goal to boost his lead in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Lemaire got his 15th goal to move three points ahead of runners-up Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers and Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo. The Montreal centre suffered the injury on Saturday night against Los Angeles Kings but played in Canadiens' 7-2 victory Tuesday against New York Islanders.

Lemaire holds the goal-scoring lead by two over Buffalo's Richard Martin and Perreault, Martin's linemate, leads in assists with 18.

Canadiens' Yvan Cournoyer jumped into the top 10 on the scoring list with a three-point output Tuesday. Cournoyer gained his ninth and 10th assists to share ninth spot with four other players.

Stan Mikita of Chicago and Johnny Bucyk of Boston share fourth place with 24 points each while three players, Dennis Hull of Chicago, Brad Park of Rangers and Ralph Backstrom of Kings, are tied for sixth.

Bryan Watson of Pittsburgh Penguins is the most-penalized player with 48 minutes in penalties, one minute more than Dave Schultz of Philadelphia Flyers.

Ken Dryden of Montreal, who allowed two goals to the Islanders, lost the goalkeeping lead to Gilles Villemure of the Rangers. They were tied with 1.75 goals-against averages going into Tuesday's play.

Winnipeg Jets scored the most lop-sided win of the world Hockey Association on Tuesday against Los Angeles.

Jets broke a tie for first place in the Western Division by drubbing the Sharks, 8-0, behind the goalkeeping of Ernie Wakely and the scoring of Christian Bordeleau and defenceman Larry Hornung. Wakely needed only 24 saves to record his first WHA shutout.

Bordeleau scored his 12th and 13th goals, both in the first period when Jets roared to a 4-0 lead, and picked up an assist on one of Hornung's two goals. Coach Bobby Hull scored his third WHA goal and got two assists to give him eight points in five games.

Minnesota Fighting Saints exploded for three goals in the final 96 seconds to score a 5-3 triumph over Cleveland Crusaders, leaders in the Eastern Division.

In a game between two division trailers, Philadelphia Blazers edged Chicago Cougars, 4-3.

Burnaby North Rated As Soccer Favorites

Burnaby North Vikings are hot favorites to win the third annual B.C. high school soccer championship to be played in Victoria Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Vikings won the inaugural championship in Victoria in 1970 and were runners-up last year to Victoria Tyees. The Tyees didn't make it into this season's tourney.

Only three schools — Burnaby North, North Delta and Abbotsford — have been in all three championships.

Oak Bay Bays and Belmont Braves are Victoria's hopes in the 12-team tourney and the Upper Island representative is Max Cameron Secondary School of Powell River.

The tournament, played during the day at Centennial Stadium and another University of Victoria field and at night in Royal Athletic Park, is held in four three-team sections.

Each school plays two games and the team with the best record in the four divisions go on to the semi-finals which will be played on Friday night. The final is at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The Bays, winners of both the Victoria High School Soccer League title and the Colonist Cup, appear to have a good chance of at least making it into the semi-finals. They are drawn in a group with Vernon, the Okanagan champion, and Vancouver Technical College, third-ranked school from the Vancouver area.

Braves have a tough start in the tournament's opening game when they meet the strong North Delta Huskies at 9 a.m. Thursday at Centennial Stadium. Castlegar is the other school in the division.

Burnaby North, which recently won its fourth straight Burnaby-New Westminster-North Shore League championship, is in a group with Powell River and Abbotsford.

The fourth section contains Steveston Packers, undefeated winners of the Vancouver League, Mt. Elizabeth Secondary of Kitimat and Selkirk Secondary of Kimberley.

Canuck Directors To Stand Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Scallen and Lyman Walters, top management of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, were committed for trial Tuesday on charges of theft and issuing a false prospectus.

Scallen is president and Walters is vice-president of Medical Investment Corp. Ltd. of Minneapolis, which controls the Canucks through a 60-per-cent holding in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., immediate parent company of the Canucks. Both hold similar positions with Northwest Sports.

Scallen was committed for trial on a charge of theft of $3 million by converting the money from Northwest Sports to Medicor, and on a charge of issuing a false prospectus, to induce the public to purchase shares in Northwest Sports.

Walters was committed for trial on a charge of issuing a false prospectus.

Scallen and Walters both elected trial by judge and jury when they appeared before provincial court judge David Moffett on Sept. 18. Judge Moffett ordered that evidence taken at the preliminary hearing not be published.

They were charged Feb. 22 after an investigation by the British Columbia Securities Commission. Results of the investigation were turned over to Vancouver lawyer Ray Paris by then-attorney-general Leslie Peterson in October, 1971.

The preliminary hearing was long delayed, with the defence winning a series of adjournment before the hearing finally began. The adjournments were protested by Mr. Paris.

No date for a trial has been set.

Oil Kings Miss Chance To Take Division Lead

Edmonton Oil Kings missed a chance Tuesday to move into the lead in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Brandon Wheat Kings withstood a last-minute power-play effort to hand the visiting Oil Kings a 5-4 loss before 1453 fans. Brandon's Rick Piche was called for holding at 18:46 and Edmonton pulled goalkeeper Doug Soetaert for a sixth attacker in the final 60 seconds. Wayne Wilhelm in the Brandon nets came up with a save on a shot by Darcy Rota, trying for his third goal, and then stopped Fred Comrie on the rebound.

Wilhelm also stopped John Rogers on a penalty shot at 16:15 of the final period with Wheat Kings holding a 5-3 lead.

New Westminster Bruins, leading the Western Division by one point, dropped a 4-2 decision to the Tigers in Medicine Hat, leaving the door open for the Oil Kings.

Lanny McDonald, Tom Lysiak and Boyd Anderson, the top line in the WCHL, accounted for all the Tiger scoring. Mcdonald had two goals and Lysiak and Anderson had a goal each. Despite the loss, Bruins' Terry Richardson was outstanding in goal, kicking out 39 shots. Jerry Thomas made 37 saves for Tigers.

Saskatoon Blades overhauled Brandon to gain a share of the Eastern Division lead, downing Vancouver Nats, 6-2. The victory extended Blades' unbeaten streak to seven games and was their fifth straight win.

Meanwhile, Regina Pats snapped a winless string at nine games, posting a 7-6 win over Winnipeg Jets before 1088 spectators in Regina. The game was tied four times before Dennis Sobchuk's second power-play goal, at 17:11 of the final period, closed out the scoring.

Pro Track Circuit Eying NFL Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Amateur stars Jim Ryun, Bob Seagren, Lee Evans and Randy Matson turned professional Tuesday as the nucleus of a track and field circuit that plans 48 meets next year in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Richmond Flowers of the National Football League's New York Giants, a former hurdles star at the University of Tennessee, also signed a contract, it was announced by the new International Track Association.

"We plan 24 to 30 events in North America," said Michael O.Haara, president of the new International Track Association, "and about 15 more in Europe.

The ITA format calls for up to 48 meets with basic purses of $10,800 each. There are to be two meets a week, one each on Saturday and Sunday, in cities that are close to one another.

"We will sign five athletes for each of 12 championship events," O'Hara said. "At each meet, the winner of an event will receive $500 with $250 for second, $100 for third and $50 for fourth."

Ryun said it had been projected to him that "a good year could be worth $18,000 and up at the beginning. That might not seem huge, but it is when you've been earning zero."

The former Kansas University world record holder in the mile said he foresees, "possible great financial benefits, as long as your name is hot in the news, in such areas as endorsements and commercials."

O'Hara said that Flowers, who makes an estimated $25,000 yearly in the National Football League, "contacted us about running since track was his first sports love."

The ITA president said he was, however, "treading cautiously in talking deals with pro football players. We want to play ball with the clubs and the NFL.

"But, for sure, we are interested in such people as Bob Hayes, Paul Warfield, Mercury Morris, Earl McCullogh and Jimmy Hines, who were track heroes as well as good football players."

O'Hara released a partial 1973 schedule which included Albuquerque, N.M., March 23; Los Angeles, March 24; Fort Worth, Tex., April 6; Baltimore, April 14; Chicago, May 4; Atlanta, May 5; Philadelphia, May 11; Pittsburgh, May 12; Vancouver, May 18; San Diego, May 19; Louisville, Ky., June 1; Richmond, Va., June 2; Long Island, N.Y., June 9.

He said ITA meets are also to be scheduled for New York, Orlando, Fla., Oakland, Cleveland, Seattle, Dallas, Toronto and Montreal.

Fire Razes Harbour House

GANGES — Three stone fireplaces, some metal grille from a bar and a pile of ashes were all that remained Tuesday of the historic Harbour House Hotel on Salt Spring Island.

The 70-year-old hotel was levelled by an early-morning fire which had firemen still mopping up more than 12 hours after it broke out.

No one was injured in the blaze which totally destroyed the old wing of the hotel.

The fire broke out shortly after 2 a.m. in the hotel which was the old family home of the Crofton family, well-known in Vancouver Island history.

"When we got there the hotel was completely engulfed in a cloud of smoke," said Cpl. D. B. Burke of the Ganges RCMP. "The flames hadn't broken out yet."

"However, within a short time the flames did break out and spread through the building. The structure was entirely wooden, "and the whole thing caved right in."

Burke said there had been four or five people in the building when the fire began, and all had been evacuated without any difficulty. Some had not yet gone to bed when the fire started, he said.

The three storey building had contained a lobby, meeting hall, dining room and kitchen on the main floor and guest rooms on the top two floors.

All members of the Ganges and Fulford Harbor volunteer fire department turned out to battle the blaze, a fire department spokesman said, with a total of about 24 men involved in the fight.

The fire was brought under control quite quickly, the spokesman said, but firemen were still on the scene after 3 p.m. Tuesday, overturning the rubble and putting out small pockets of fire which remained.

A new wing of the hotel, known as the Condor Inn and containing a pub and cocktail lounge, was not seriously damaged in the fire, Burke said. It sustained some smoke damage and heat blew out some windows but the fire itself did not damage that wing.

Cause of the fire has still not been determined and RCMP and fire officials are continuing an investigation.

Council Studying Lower Status, Amalgamation

Sixty Years' Progress Duncan City to Town?

DUNCAN — This city, 60 years after its incorporation following the breakaway move from North Cowichan in 1912, is now standing on a new threshhold — whether to maintain the city title or to revert to town in order to save money.

Several weeks ago Ald. Hamish Mutter was requested to study the proposal and Monday night he told council Duncan could save up to eight mills a year because of cuts in the law enforcement sector.

At the same time Mutter and some other council members held an unofficial talk with members of the North Cowichan council to discuss the possibility of an amalgamation.

"It (amalgamation) is met with mixed feelings by both councils. Many problems would have to be solved first. The discussion was useful but there was no indication that amalgamation could come at this time," Mutter said.

In connection with the proposed town status, a city reclassification plebescite bylaw was given two readings and now elected city officials will meet with government representatives at Victoria to discuss the matter further. An opinion poll could be held next month.

In other business, city council has acted promptly on recommendations from the city's engineer, Don Duncan, and decided to make Craig Street into a one-way street from Government to Ingram.

Although the engineer had recommended making several other downtown thoroughfares one-way streets, council Monday thought it would be better to try the proposed scheme on Craig first. The streets committee and the engineer will further study other proposed one-way routes and determine possible traffic patterns resulting from it.

In a letter to city council the Zenith Gyro Club of Duncan which recently contributed a further $1,000 as part of a $5,000 pledge, stated: "Recent reports indicate that your swimming pool study committee has presented its recommendations and we now strongly urge that both councils jointly adopt an indoor swimming pool project without delay."

The club will be advised by council that until the swimming pool study committee files its final report councils (Duncan and North Cowichan) cannot make a decision.

A $200 grant request from the Cowichan Symphony Society will only be partly fulfilled but council will contribute $50 to the symphony coffers. society chairman Mark Sharp stated in his letter, "We are only too aware of the many demands made upon your resources, but I believe, this is the first time for many years that the Cowichan Symphony Society has asked the city for assistance."

Making Use of Rocky Farmland . . . . . . Rocky Road for Dairy Farmer

Subdivision Aims, Proposed Bylaw Clash

By KLAUS MUENTER
Colonist Correspondent

MILL BAY — One of the Mill Bay residents who is against a proposed subdivision bylaw is Klaas Siebring who said in an interview this week that new regulations would make it impossible for him to carry through his 20-acre subdivision.

The 52-year-old dairy farmer, who came to Canada from his former homeland, Holland, 22 years ago bought the 100-acre dairy farm 18 years ago. Together with his wife and the older of 11 children Siebring began to transform the rundown farm into a prosperous agricultural enterprise.

So far the 60 head of Holstein cows including 30 milking cows have been able to support the family comfortably and Siebring and his wife were able to offer three older of the 10 daughters a university education. Nevertheless health conditions and the cost of higher education for the other children are forcing the middle-aged couple to look for additional finances.

Soil Bad for Farming

To enable the Siebrings to get additional funds, but at the same time to keep the farm intact for their eight-year-old boy, Siebring decided this spring to subdivide 20 acres of his land which would not be suitable for farming.

The land consists mainly of bush and rocky soil and the dairy farmer described the proposed site for 38 houses as an ideal residential site that would not interfere with the privacy of other people with the exception of two or three neighbors who would be able to see the subdivision.

After Siebring decided to put in a 20-acre subdivision with half-acre lots he was told by health department and highways department officials that the proposed subdivision would be no problem. That was in May and Siebring made his plans under existing provincial requirements.

Survey Work Halted

In June Siebring had the 20 acres surveyed and at the same time he had a road put in. "The surveyor was just winding up his work at the beginning of August when he was stopped by a member of the advisory planning commission who even threatened him with an injunction," Siebring said.

Two days after Siebring phoned the surveyor to find the reasons for the delay of his work and he was told what had happened. "About the same time Mr. Keir (Ralph Keir, Mill Bay director of the Cowichan Valley regional board) came and told me officially that the subdivision was stopped pending new regulations. I did not plan my subdivision because of the proposed subdivision bylaw but the bylaw was planned to stop my subdivision," Siebring said.

Old Law Explained

He explained under the old provincial regulations his proposed subdivision with half-acre lots served by a community water system would be acceptable. Under the proposed subdivision bylaw half-acre lots would have to be served by a water and sewer system, one-acre lots would have to have a water system and two-acre lots would neither be required to be served by water nor by a sewer system.

Siebring said if he had to meet the new regulations he would have to subdivide a much greater portion of his valuable farmland which then would threaten the continuation of farming. "If you break up all the farmland into four-acre or two-acre lots only the rich people will be able to invade our open spaces and our own kids have to move into the city because they no longer could afford the taxes or could not even buy the land," Siebring said.

People 'Very Concerned'

Mill Bay regional director Ralph Keir said people in general are very concerned about haphazard development and therefore at a public meeting at Mill Bay August 8 the 90 people attending almost unanimously endorsed amendments to the existing provincial regulations recommended by the director and the areas advisory planning commission.

Keir said the proposed Siebring subdivision was not discussed at that meeting and until a petition against the proposal was received Oct. 3 few people had even been aware of that development. That petition, signed by 40 residents, strongly protested the proposed subdivision "since this development does not meet the standards of the proposed bylaw and could be extremely detrimental to the local environment."

About the same time Keir told Siebring that he may lose a lot of money if he would continue with his subdivision. "We had been talking about a subdivision bylaw since April in the advisory planning commission because we felt our rural amenities should be protected," Keir said.

The director stated "the proposed subdivision bylaw is simply the existing provincial subdivision regulations amended by increasing the lot sizes. The reasons for introducing them at this time is not to prevent subdivisions which are a necessary step in community growth, but to control it and to attempt to preserve what is essentially a rural atmosphere, to ensure our existing water resources are sufficient for all and to preserve the health of the community through having ample septic tanks available."

Holdup Reason Explained

The first readings to the Mill Bay subdivision bylaw were given by the regional board last month and after a recent visit to the highways department Keir noted that "it was evident that the Siebring and the Frayne Road subdivision were stopped by the highways department because of pending new regulations." The Frayne Road is another subdivision by another developer in the Mill Bay area.

Meanwhile a petition, signed by 22 per cent of the 700 Mill Bay residents, is asking the regional board not to go ahead with the proposed subdivision bylaw because "we feel the highways department and health department regulations are adequate and leave room for future development."

Suspect Arrested In Bridge Blast

LAKE COWICHAN — The CNR section man was carrying out o routine inspection of the rail line from Youbou to Lake Cowichan last week when he discovered one of the trestles had been damaged by an explosion.

The ties had been splintered and the structure weakened by the blast, and could have collapsed had a train passed before the damage was discovered.

Investigation by the Lake Cowichan RCMP of the trestle, which had been dynamited, led to the arrest of Clifford Lundgren, 21, of Duncan. Lundgren appeared in Duncan Provincial court Tuesday charged with setting off an explosion.

The dynamite was set off Halloween night but because the railway is only used once in a while by logging trains, the damaged trestle was not discovered until several days later.

The explosion was the third incident involving dynamite within a month in the Lake Cowichan area, but marked the first time any damage resulted.

Lundgren was remanded 30 days pending a psychiatric examination and report.

Anti-Airport Glenora Residents Stop Bulldozers with Picketers

By KLAUS MUENTER
Colonist Correspondent

GLENORA — Until now the displeasure of Glenora residents about an airport there was limited to audible protests but now pickets at the site prevent further development.

Tuesday afternoon a group of about 30 residents, mostly women, some children and a few men stopped a bulldozer of a private firm and the operator went home. The stage is now set for a showdown between the Glenora residents on one side and the Cowichan Valley regional board and the Cowichan Airport Society on the other side. The latter two have the law on their side but the residents are carrying their determined and strong protest under the umbrella of human rights. They have one single request — to be left alone.

Speaking for the people at the picket line Shirley Stewart said that they noticed the bulldozers being moved to the airport site Tuesday morning. Quickly the picket line was gathered. "We feel that the regional board sold us down the river for the pleasure of a few people. We never wanted the airport. We will stop all work on the airport from now on," Mrs. Stewart said.

She explained that it took a while for the whole community to become organized against the development. "Although there were a lot of objections before we were never organized as a group. This crown land should have been left as it was. We don't need an airport here. Now there is a four-lane highway to Cassidy and people who want to fly can get there quite easily and quickly. We don't want our rural way of life upset by an airport," she said.

The regional board, landlord of the 40 acres of crown land, and the Cowichan Airport Society agreed a year ago that the Glenora airport should be in operation in the fall of 1976. However, none of the two groups reckoned with the determined protest from the residents at Glenora who already had voiced strong objections months before the regional board and the airport society signed a five-year lease in November 1971.

Tory Anscomb Dies in Victoria

The unreconstructed, right-wing curmudgeon is dead. That's what Herbert Anscomb, 80, who died Sunday in Royal Jubilee Hospital, called himself just two years ago.

"And I don't give a damn who knows it," he said at the time.

Anscomb was many things in his time. He was leader of the provincial Conservative party. He was a minister in several cabinet posts. And he was co-premier in the province's Coalition government.

He was the youngest mayor Victoria ever had when he was elected at the age of 37 and held the office from 1929 to 1931. He was the youngest reeve Oak Bay ever had when he was elected at the age of 33 and served from 1925 to 1927.

Oak Bay elected him to the Legislature in 1932 and he remained there until 1952 when, as finance minister, he was fired by Premier Byron Johnson and lost his seat in the election following the breakup of the Coalition government.

The man who scorned the change of his party's name to Progressive Conservative (he said he was a Tory and was proud to belong to a party with a proud and progressive history) came to Canada from England in 1911 at the age of 19.

His first job in Victoria was with a pick and shovel. He later took a job as a clerk with B.C. Electric at $50 a month, then became a chartered accountant and went into business for himself.

In the Coalition government he was minister of mines and fisheries, minister of municipal affairs and minister of public works. On the death of R. L. Maitland he was elected leader and made finance minister.

He was known as a man with no hobbies who preferred work above social life, sports or cards, who read mainly business and financial newspapers, worked early and late and rarely took a holiday.

A teetotaler, he was involved in Growers Wine Ltd. It was said he puffed and chewed his way through as many as 15 cigars a day "spewing smoke like a locomotive."

Newspaper profiles described him as dynamic, hard-hitting, a dramatic speechmaker, tough, sometimes brutally blunt yet charming and suave when he wanted to be.

Anscomb didn't agree with bilingualism. He believed there should be only one language "and that's the British language," he said two years ago.

Earlier he said he would rather see Canada trade with Socialist Britain than with Yankeeland, his name for the U.S.

He felt that anyone who abandoned outright free enterprise had "joined the other side." He referred to the CCF party as communistic.

He was still being forceful and outspoken when interviewed in November, 1970. He was 100 years behind the times in his thinking, he said, but he liked it that way.

After Mrs. Anscomb died in 1965 the former Tory leader made his home at 356 Newport and at the Union Club. The couple had no children. Anscomb is survived by a brother, Bute, in Vancouver.

Funeral will be held at 1:15 p.m. Thursday in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay, with Rev. Cyril Venables and Archdeacon A. E. Hendy officiating.

NANAIMO — An 84-year-old pedestrian was killed when he was hit by a car here Monday night. Charles Carlson of Maki Road, Chase River, was struck by a car driven by Sandra E. McNab, 37, of 859 Oakley Street, Nanaimo, as he was crossing the Trans-Canada Highway at Chase River.

Whale of a Show

Can Sound of Music Cheer Up Haida?

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

World-famous jazz flutist Paul Horn is giving what could be considered the most important performances of his career these days to an audience of one he chooses to describe as "my biggest fan."

He is using the word "biggest" in its true context. His audience is Haida the killer whale at Oak Bay Marina's Sealand.

And the performances are important to anyone who considers the recovery of an ailing whale important. This includes Horn, whose music — it turns out — is deemed to be a vital part of Haida's treatment.

"This has been going on for the last two days," Sealand owner Bob Wright said Monday night. "And there has been a definite reaction from Haida. His dorsal fin has straightened out, which is supposed to be a good sign.

"We're pulling everything out of the hat we can. Haida has responded before to recorded music, including everything from Bach to rock 'n roll. But he has responded better to Paul's flute than anything else. He comes over and looks at Paul and is actually vocalizing back at him. It is quite spectacular."

Haida has been listless and off his feed since shortly after the death Nov. 2 of his mate, Chimo, the albino killer whale.

Wright said Haida did have an infection he might well have caught from Chimo, who died because of a rare hereditary factor — chediak-higoshi syndrome. This is something which breaks down the mechanism necessary for fighting off infection.

The world had barely got over the shock of Chimo's death when it was discovered Haida just wasn't his spunky old self. He had no desire for food or fun. His public performances had to be cancelled and a medical team brought in.

In the past seven days he has undergone five medical examinations. Monday night the experts had him up in a sling above his tank for the most thorough check yet. It showed his blood was all right.

The next step was to be a tube feeding of vitamins, calories and protein.

"The results tonight were good," Wright said. "The animal has shown definite signs of improvement today."

While the infection played a part, Wright isn't overlooking the importance of the emotional impact caused by Chimo's death. The two had not only romped together for the public. They were that way about each other. And suddenly there was no more romance in Haida's life.

Wright said there was no precedent for the use of a flute. It was just a hunch someone had because of Haida's apparent fondness for recorded music.

So along came Horn for half-hour performances from the whale-feeding platform at the end of the tank.

The result, so far, has been what might be described as the strangest musical duet of all time. Horn improvises and so does Haida.

Great Lakes Calamity

Cottage owned by Victor Saladonis in Cleveland's lakeshore suburb of Bay Village collapsed Tuesday under pounding waves as fierce storm whipped up Great Lakes. Tuesday's storm, which also rocked southwestern Ontario, was punctuated by high water levels. Lake Erie waters are close to record levels and many lakeshore homes are threatened.

Egan Pours Oil on Troubled Waters

New B.C.-Alaska Era Finds Going Slippery

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

British Columbia and Alaska entered what was reportedly a new era of co-operation Tuesday, then wasted little time in disagreeing over the question of supertankers.

After meeting in his office with Governor William Egan of Alaska and Commissioner Jim Smith of the Yukon, Premier Barrett said he and Egan had "agreed to disagree" over the use of the big tankers to ship oil down the west coast from Alaska to Cherry Point, Wash.

Although it appeared that tankers were an inevitability, B.C. would not give up the fight to prevent their use. If this battle is lost, Barrett wants to see the oil companies forced to post bonds worth millions of dollars.

Meanwhile, Barrett wants environmental safeguards established on a co-operative basis among B.C., Alaska and Washington state. He said he shared with Egan, the contents of a telephone conversation he had with Washington Governor Dan Evans in which it was agreed to set up joint legislative machinery to standardize pollution control measures.

In case of any ecological disaster, the idea would be to co-ordinate efforts and "establish a joint chain of command" in terms of using the resources at hand, Barrett said.

"We are interested in co-ordinating among our departments the kind of controls the environment needs," Barrett said.

While he disagreed with Egan's contention that the supertankers would not pose a real threat to the environment, Barrett nevertheless complimented him on his "first-class job of pioneering in terms of making these oil companies responsible." He said Egan had demonstrated a tough manner with the oil companies.

The plan is to make them toe the line economically.

Barrett said the machinery necessary for the environmental co-operation would be very informal.

"We're going to let the politicians meet and start working these problems out," he said. "We don't intend to go the conference route or the diplomatic exchange of lengthy papers. We just want to informally initiate and find accommodation that is best for all our jurisdictions."

He doesn't see this need for one permanent committee, but does think each jurisdiction might form a committee of its own. He plans to meet in Washington with Evans early in January and later in Alaska with Egan.

This brought the premier to his goal for the future. He said he hoped within two years that B.C. could play host to an environmental con-

Hunters Become Hunted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Two hunters said Tuesday they had to scramble for their lives under a barrage of rifle fire from an unknown gunman while hunting Monday.

Gilbert Dupont, 26, of Prince George, said he and room-mate Robert Gervais, 23, briefly exchanged shots with the gunman, who fled in a car.

RCMP Tuesday confirmed that Dupont had made a complaint but said no action would be taken because the assailant could not be described.

He said he and Gervais were hunting moose on a logging road and became stuck in the mud. As they were walking along the road toward a bulldozer which they were going to use to pull their vehicle out, a man began shooting at them from across a river.

He said "about 30 rounds" were fired by the man.

"It was like a machine-gun. We climbed on the cat and even while we were on it, he was still shooting. Three shots came so close I don't know how I'm still living today. My partner fired two shots at him and I exchanged one shot.

"We fired in his direction and he took off like a bat out of hell.

"He knew he wasn't shooting at animals." Dupont said he and Gervais were wearing red shirts and hats.

Mail Walkout Said 'Study'

TORONTO (CP) — More than 100 postal employees walked off the job for about an hour Tuesday at the main post office and at the airmail forwarding terminal at Toronto International Airport.

The employees said the walkout was for a "study session."

A post office spokesman said the walkout came during its "assured mail dispatch" time, which is set up to coincide with Air Canada Flights.

Strike Brake On Way

QUEBEC (CP) — A bill to ensure maintenance of essential services in a strike by 8,500 Hydro-Quebec workers was given first reading in the Quebec national assembly Tuesday.

Second-reading debate on the bill began immediately.

The bill was introduced after more than an hour's debate on a motion to proceed with an emergency debate on the legislation.

The motion passed by a vote of 67 to 6, with only Parti Quebecois members opposed.

The bill would have effect from the time it is enacted until the current dispute between Hydro-Quebec and its employees is settled.

It provides for fines of $50 to $250 a day for individuals refusing to provide essential services during the strike.

The bill defines essential services as all work necessary to ensure "full operation" of all electrical and gas services, and includes pay and clerical work involved in providing the services.

Europe Storm Toll Climbs to 64 Dead

United Press International

Europe and Great Britain Tuesday began mopping up the wreckage left by gale force winds that ripped across the continent wreaking heavy damage and leaving at least 64 persons dead in seven countries.

Scores more were injured and the high winds and rain sent flood waters into the homes of thousands.

Hardest hit by the winds which at some points reached 135 miles per hour were West Germany with 29 dead and East Germany with 12. The victims included an 11-year-old girl killed in Heutthenthal, West Germany, when a school building collapsed, and a woman killed in East Berlin when a church tower fell on her.

There were 10 killed in Poland, seven in Holland, three in Britain and one in Belgium, France and Portugal.

"The devil is loose," said a spokesman for the West German fire department which Monday answered more than 1,000 emergency calls relating to the storm.

West German insurance agencies said damage there would run into the millions of dollars.

In Britain, a falling chimney killed a Canadian tourist, Mrs. Phylis Davidson, 43, of Oshawa, Ont., and police blamed rain and wind conditions on a traffic accident that killed two men near Brighton.

The Polish news agency PAP said the winds — which in places hit 75 miles an hour — tore roofs off houses, overturned cars, played havoc with electricity and telephone connections and disturbed road and rail traffic in many parts of the country.

Teachers' Pay Tops $17,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver School Board and its 2,682 teachers ratified a 1972-73 contract Tuesday which gives the teachers a salary increase of 9.17 per cent.

The increase brings the salary of a beginning teacher with two years of university to $7,093 and that of a teacher with a masters degree and 12 years experience to $17,172.

MONTREAL (CP) — About 240 Nordair Ltd. employees in Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories went on strike at midnight Tuesday night to back contract requests.

Two Bandits Caught After Wild Pursuit

GREENSBORO, N.C. (CP) — Two armed bank robbers, who held five hostages for more than four hours and sought unsuccessfully to get an escape airplane, were captured Tuesday night in a wooded area after their car was rammed by pursuing authorities.

The two gunmen bolted from their getaway station wagon after it was rammed off the road by an unmarked police car, but officials grabbed them.

Police said four persons were injured but none seriously. One of the injured was identified as an FBI agent. It was not known if any hostages were hurt.

The robbers, holding their hostages, had led police on a chase through middle North Carolina after getting through a cordon around a Greensboro bank following a robbery attempt.

Police said at one point the robbers took the station wagon and the bank employee hostages to Greensboro's Friendship Airport and demanded an airplane and pilot.

Police said they were unable to make arrangements to meet the demand.

After parking in the middle of a runway at Greensboro for a short time, the robbers and their hostages raced to Winston-Salem. After getting there, the station wagon headed back to Greensboro.

Gypsies Charged In Palace Case

LONDON (UPI) — Eleven gypsies who begged Queen Elizabeth for a night's shelter in the courtyard of Buckingham Palace faced a judge Tuesday and pleaded innocent of breaking any law.

The 11, led by Grattan Puxon, secretary of the World Romany Congress, and his wife, Sanije, were released on bail of 10 pounds ($23.50) each and ordered to stand trial Dec. 22.

They are charged with obstructing police, not having permission to camp in the Queen's gardens, failing to remove their caravans when asked and staying in St. James Park when police told them to leave.

The charges and the call at Buckingham Palace stemmed from a gypsy protest Monday night against proposed legislation setting up designated sites for gypsy camps.

During the demonstration the Puxons knocked at the tradesmen's door of the palace and handed in a traditional gypsy gift for the Queen — a bouquet of carved wood flowers.

"We also asked Her Majesty if we could take refuge inside the palace courtyard for the night," Puxon said. He did not disclose the response but said police impounded gypsy caravans parked outside the palace.

B.C. Civil Service Rolls Along Unchanged

By MICHAEL HUGHES

Two months after the New Democrats took over the government of British Columbia, the civil service rolls along unchanged although the management structures of the province's two crown corporations have been scrambled.

Despite the administrative flip-flop that occurred in the Aug. 30 election, the day-to-day business of running the government is handled by virtually the same public servants as were at their desks prior to the defeat of the Social Credit party that had ruled since 1952.

With one notable exception, only the executive boards of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority and B.C. Railway bear the imprint of the "socialist hordes," as former premier W. A. C. Bennett called the NDP.

The exception is the firing of Ronald Worley as deputy minister of travel industry.

Worley was a personal friend of Bennett and last year completed a book on the former premier entitled the Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett.

Asked about his dismissal, Worley, now consultant for a Victoria radio station, said he could not work with the NDP because he is a "democratic free-enterpriser."

Other than Richard Colby, who was appointed by the NDP to replace Worley, all deputy ministers remain the same.

Premier Dave Barrett, a former civil servant himself, said when he took office that the civil servants need not fear that the axe would fall once the "hordes" moved in.

However, the premier has said all public servants should retire at 65. A spokesman in the Civil Service Commission said it was new policy under the NDP that the compulsory-retirement-at-65 rule will be enforced.

In the past, he said, those who reached that age were allowed to remain, subject to a review every three months, as long as the department they worked in approved. As a result there are a number of over-65 employees among the 30,000 government workers who will gradually be replaced.

The leave at 65 rule becomes interesting in light of the government's appointment of 64-year-old David Cass-Beggs to replace Dr. Gordon Shrum, 76, as chairman of B.C. Hydro when he retired Dec. 31.

The appointment of Cass-Beggs, now chairman of Manitoba Hydro and former general manager of the Saskatchewan Power Corp. was the subject of some criticism because of his NDP leanings.

Bennett termed the appointment "political patronage" and called for a public inquiry into the appointment, saying his performance in Manitoba and Saskatchewan had been reported by some as less than magnificent.

Asked whether there was any conflict with Cass-Begg's appointment and his own feelings about retirement at 65, Barrett would only say "he's not 65 yet," touching off speculation that Cass-Beggs may head Hydro only a short time.

Included in other Hydro personnel changes was the disbanding of the 10-man board of directors, which included two former Social Credit cabinet ministers and other party favorites, and replacing it with a five-man board.

The two former cabinet ministers — resources minister Ray Williston and recreation minister Ken Kiernan — were replaced with two NDP ministers. Also dismissed from the board was Einar Gunderson, long-time Social Credit party fund-raiser and a

Parents Suing Teachers Next?

Parents may soon be suing incompetent teachers for malpractice.

That was the warning given to a Greater Victoria school board committee Tuesday night by trustee Dr. Philip Ney.

"A teacher who leaves a child with a learning disability" could be sued by a parent just as a doctor who leaves a child with a limp could be sued, Ney told the administration committee.

Ney urged the committee to find out from the board's lawyer whether the district could be liable for a malpractice suit brought against one of its teachers.

The committee agreed to obtain a legal opinion and then to discuss the matter again next month.

Ney suggested that if the board could be liable, it should buy malpractice insurance to protect itself.

It seemed that some schools have far more learning and emotional disturbances than others, Ney said, and he felt that, to a degree, this was the result of teachers' personalities.

It is not impossible that someday a parent could be suing because a child had been seduced by a teacher, Ney pointed out. He said he knew of such cases in other places.

The committee agreed with the general principle that all applicants for teaching positions in the district and those recommended to permanent appointment be given personality tests.

It was emphasized that the object of these tests would be to try to weed out any deviant personalities.

Rigidity Rapped By Curtis

"Using a sledgehammer to kill a flea," was the way Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis Tuesday night described his traffic department's approach to simple problems.

And, he added during a public works committee meeting, he is getting very upset about the rigidity and closed minds within the traffic and engineering department.

They did not seem willing, he said to try different kinds of parking bans such as residential parking only, or 10 or 15-minute parking zones to combat problems caused by day-long parking.

Parking Request

At issue was a request from a McKenzie Avenue resident for residential parking to be allowed outside her home in the 900 Block.

The woman is confined to a wheelchair and has regular visits from a nurse and from Meals on Wheels. All these cars have to park a distance from her home because there is a no-parking zone in front of her house.

Reporting to council on a change from no-parking to residential parking, municipal engineer Bob Daye said enforcement of restricted parking is difficult. Either police time has to be wasted checking the credentials of people parking their cars, or they have to ticket all cars and let the owner fight the ticket.

Traffic Grows

In any case, added the report, with growing traffic on McKenzie there will eventually have to be a ban on parking all the way along the road.

Curtis objected to the report.

"Far too often out of the traffic branch and the engineering department we are dealing with a closed mind, and I am getting very tired of it," said Curtis.

Bans Possible

Parking had been banned in the area, close to Quadra, because of day-long parking by B.C. Telephone and Saanich municipal employees.. Daye suggested that parking could be banned during the daytime from Monday to Friday, leaving the area free for evening or weekend visitors.

"I can't see a Saanich policeman ticketing a Meals on Wheels or nurse's vehicle," he added.

"You are asking the police to wink at some vehicles and not at others just because we've received this letter," retorted Curtis.

Other Places

There could be similar problems in other places that council doesn't know anything about, he said.

"The problem is we have built up a rigidity in traffic signs in this municipality and we are not willing to bend, to experiment, to try something new in most cases. I am becoming very concerned about it.

"You ask for consideration of this and that and your suggestions are dismissed summarily by the people at the traffic level and police and I am getting very, very upset about it."

Curtis said the request had been made to find a way of preventing all-day parking by workers in that area, and the answer had been to stop all parking.

"This is using a sledgehammer to kill a flea," he said.

He suggested alternatives and it was decided to recommend to council that residential parking be tried in that area.

In other business the committee asked for a report on the feasibility of connecting the drainage on the east and west sides of Maplewood Road to counteract winter flooding from 3440 to 3530 Maplewood.

It was explained that a new drainage system would have to be paid for by 12 property owners, only four of whom see benefits.

E. W. Hockin, 3510 Maplewood explained that his basement had been flooded three times within four months last winter, putting his furnace out of operation each time.

The committee also decided to recommend that:

- Work be started to provide drainage on Major, Totem and Bethune, at an estimated cost of $32,000;
- Reports on an estimated $70,000 drainage system for Ash-Barrie-Bissenden in the Cordova Bay area be given priority;
- Strawberry Vale school auxiliary be informed that sidewalks for the school area are on the list of proposed sidewalks to be installed during 1973.

Immersion French Class Eyed

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Experimental immersion programs in French may begin in Greater Victoria district schools next September.

The Greater Victoria school board's curriculum committee Tuesday night approved in principle the establishment of at least one voluntary immersion class in French for Grade 7 pupils in the 1973-74 academic year.

A similar program would be established at the Grade 1 level in September, 1974.

However, both programs must be approved by the B.C. education department before they can be implemented.

In the Grade 7 program, all subjects normally taught in English would be taught in French by French - speaking teachers and hopefully students would speak French between classes.

Purpose of the program, according to the committee, would be "to provide students with bilingual capacity."

At least 25 students would be required to establish one pilot class, but no more than 30 would be accepted for it. If 56 or more applications were received and if a second suitable teacher could be found, a second class could be set up.

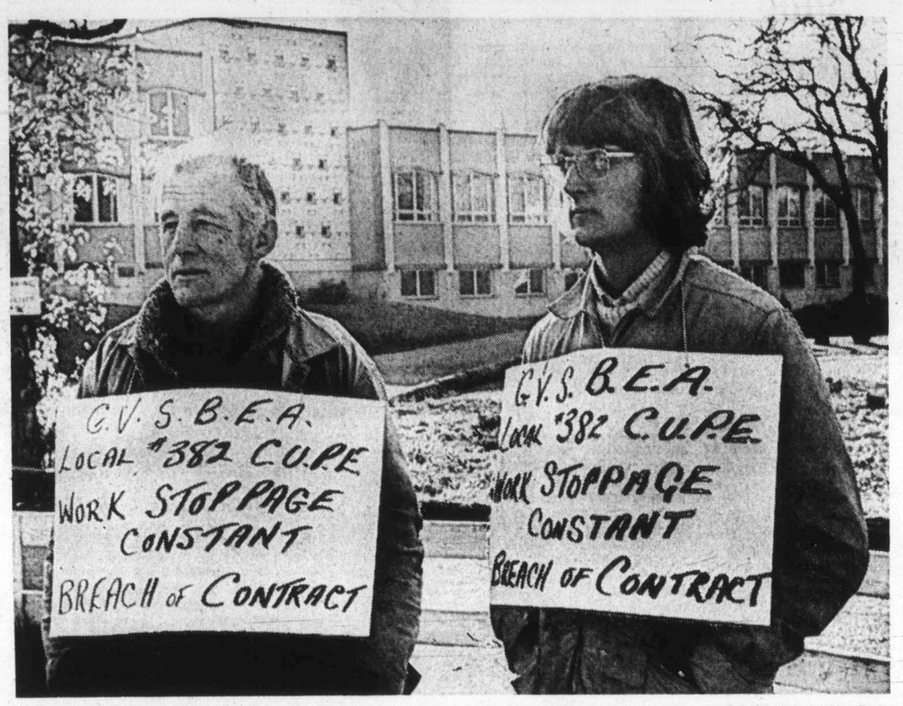

The students would be accepted in the order their applications were received with no prerequisites. Parents would be responsible for providing transportation to the class, but the class would be set up in a school near a bus line.

The program would be restricted to the two Grade 7 classes for at least three years. If a similar Grade 1 class is established, it would be the only one for at least three years.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore said the Grade 7 level had been chosen for the first program because it appeared that suitable teachers and resource personnel were available at that level. However, some trustees felt the program might be more effective if it began at a lower grade.

Some trustees were also concerned over what would happen to the Grade 7 students the following year as they reverted to classes in English.

The district's curriculum department will review the general proposal and present further details to the board later.

Workers Picket, Return

Maintenance men from the Greater Victoria school district were back on the job late Tuesday afternoon after setting up picket lines around the district administration building and maintenance shops for about eight hours earlier in the day.

But union spokesmen and school trustees were still not agreed on the cause of the work stoppage, which had been decided upon by the union during the weekend.

The 30 men, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 382, agreed to return to work about 2 p.m. after their union leaders had met for 1½ hours with district superintendent A. J. Longmore and other school board officials.

Union local president Fred Newell said some areas of disagreement had been resolved at the meeting and a further meeting had been scheduled for next Tuesday.

Newell said cause of the work stoppage had been "constant breaches of the collective agreement, unfair treatment of the workers and threats of dismissals for the slightest cause."

"It was a multitude of things built up over two years," said Newell, all involving what he termed "the dictatorship attitude" taken by the school administration.

But school trustee Peter Bunn said these charges were "nonsense." All CUPE members were well-treated by the administration and had excellent working conditions, he said.

Bunn believed the real cause of the stoppage was a desire by the union to put pressure on the district in its negotiations with the union for a new contract.

Present contract expires Dec. 31.

Newell said, however, that the stoppage had nothing whatsoever to do with the new contract.

The picket lines went up at 7 a.m. Tuesday but picketers said they were for information only and did not try to stop others from going to work.

The picketers said that only the outside maintenance crews were off work and that school janitors, who belong to the same local, had stayed on the job. Secretarial and office staff, members of a different local of CUPE, worked as usual.

Regiment's Museum Collecting Items

Vancouver Island's active militia infantry, the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) is in the process of collecting items for a military museum.

The regiment, which perpetuates the original 16th Canadian Scottish of the First World War, is inviting veterans of both world wars to consider contributing items relating to the regiment to the museum. In charge is the regimental adjutant at Bay Street Armory, Victoria.

Quadra Ramp Opens

The Quadra Street overpass on the Pat Bay Highway will be opened today, the highways department announced Monday.

After today motorists heading north on Quadra and wishing to continue north on the highway will use the ramp at the east end of the overpass.

Southbound traffic on the highway transferring to Quadra will turn right and follow the loop south and west of the overpass. This will lead them up onto the overpass and then to Quadra.

Boarding Homes Probed

Determining the standard of boarding homes with housekeeping facilities is the aim of a survey the Greater Victoria health board wants Victoria to undertake.

The health board wants answers to these questions:

- Are elderly people on fixed incomes forced to live in substandard boarding homes?
- How many landlords are making an effort to keep their premises at a resonable standard?
- How many old people are living in boarding homes without any supervision who should have medical or paramedical care?
- How many hotels are renting substandard units to senior citizens?

The type of accommodation in question should provide for cooking facilities, adequate sanitary facilities, and access to water.

In most cases, according to health board officials, the cooking facilities consist of a hotplate; often the tenants are old people who can no longer use the electric equipment without creating a possible fire hazard, they said.

Senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread told the health board Tuesday that substandard boarding home accommodation can be found in all four core municipalities, but primarily in Victoria proper.

The survey should disclose whether or not landlords paint the premises often enough, refurnish the units at regular intervals and whether or not sanitary facilities are acceptable.

The matter will go before Victoria council after the city's health committee has discussed it.

Wallet, Cash Returned

When you lose a wallet with more than $300 in it these days you don't often get it back — and even if you do, the chances are that it will be empty.

But Mrs. George Deyaeger of Jordan River was lucky.

She was shopping at Woodward's store, 3125 Douglas, Tuesday morning when she found her wallet was missing. She assumed it had been stolen and reported it to Victoria police. It was 11:41 a.m.

Marguerite Chan, of 1142 Balmoral, was also shopping at Woodward's. She found Mrs. Deyaeger's wallet containing $387 on the sidewalk outside and phoned police. It was 11:45 a.m.

Now Mrs. Deyaeger has her wallet and Mrs. Chan has a bouquet of flowers as a thank you.

Germs from Pet Turtles May Poison Food

Nearly all of the turtles sold by Victoria pet shops and major department stores are contaminated with salmonella bacteria which may cause food poisoning, the Greater Victoria health board was told Tuesday.

To get the "dangerous pets" off the market, the health board may ask municipalities to issue business and trade licences to pet shops and department stores only if they undertake not to sell turtles.

Before such a request is made, however, the health board will ask Victoria city solicitor Terry O'Grady for legal advice.

Medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread told members of the board that most of the turtles sold by pet shops and department stores are imported from Mexico where they have been bred in contaminated waters.

He said two years ago the problem was brought to the attention of storekeepers and, for a while, the turtles disappeared from the market.

Now, he said, they were being sold again in substantial quantities.

Whitbread added it was almost impossible to decontaminate the turtles. If it could be done at all, it would cost a great deal of money.

He also said action was being taken by the federal customs department and the provincial agricultural department to draw up regulations that would prohibit the importing of turtles into British Columbia.
